Despite Arrests, U. S. Kidnaping Racket Is Laws Major Problem

Convictions Have Not Proved Wide Deterrent to This Phase of Crime—St. Paul Suffered Most from Scourge.

New York, May 11 (AP).—Despite an unusually successful record of arrests and convictions of kidnapers, the stealing of human beings for ransom continued to present the most serious challenge to American police.

The results of police work in most "snatch" cases of the last two years has put many abductors and bad men behind bars, yet they have not appeared to serve appreciably as deterrents to this form of crime.

The cycle of kidnapings which has kept police and federal agents particularly active dates from the abduction of the Lindbergh baby March 1, 1932. The crime, ending in murder, resulted in the payment of a $50,000 ransom to persons unknown and the spending of hundreds of thousands of dollars by police agencies. The crime remains today unsolved.

Another child—little June Robles of Nogales, New Mexico—is in the hands of kidnapers (or possibly a victim of kidnaper-killers) today. The case remains unsolved, the ransom of $15,000 unpaid, the child still missing.

The most recent kidnaping is that of the wealthy William Gettles, a broker. Abducted from his home near Los Angeles late Wednesday night, he was still missing today, his fate unknown.

The government and various local governments have plenty of gold stars to mark their work on other cases, however.

In the kidnaping of Charles Boettcher II of Denver, who was held captive three weeks, Verne Sankey (among others) was finally seized and charged with the crime. He committed suicide.

The kidnapings of Jerome Factor 13 months ago in Chicago and of his father, John (Jake the Barber) Factor nearly three months later have been solved and the kidnapers in the latter case—the infamous Touhy gang of Chicago—sent to prison for long terms. The kidnaping of John J. O'Connell of Albany, N. Y., which had political ramifications owing to the prominence in New York state politics of the youth's uncles ,is closed, with Manny Strewl serving time for the crime.

The abductions of August Luer of Alton, Ill., of little Peggy McMath at Marwichport, Mass., and of Charles F. Urschel, Oklahoma City oil man, are all scored as victories for the law, with kidnapers in each case captured, convicted and sentenced.

The kidnap-murder of young Brooke Hart at San Jose, Calif., had a national reaction when his murderers were taken from jail and lynched.

If any city could be said to have suffered most from the kidnap scourge it is St. Paul, with three major kidnapings—Edward Bremer, Haskell Bohn and William Hamm. Kansas City is another community which had more than its share, with two nationally-known abductions—those of Mrs. Nell Quinlan Donnelly (now the wife of former Senator Reed of Missouri), and Miss Mary McElroy, daughter of the city manager. Kidnapers were caught, tried and sentenced in both cases. One kidnaper was sentenced to death in the McElrop case.

Among the child kidnapings the case of James De Jute of Niles, O., was of special public interest because it occurred the day after the Lindbergh baby was stolen. Two kidnapers have been sent to prison for life in that case.

In every case except those of the Robles baby and Gettle, now under investigation, the fate of the victim has been established. In nearly all cases he was finally freed.

Buick Plant Closes In Flint Due To Strike

Flint, Mich., May 11 (AP)—The Buick Motor Co. plant closed here today, close on the heels of a walkout of union employes in the Fisher Cody Corporation No. 1 plant which makes Buick bodies.

Fourteen thousand Buick employes and an estimated 5,000 Fisher employes were idle.

Although H. H. Curtice, president and general manager of the Buick Company, was out of the city it was learned from reliable sources that the plant will remain closed until Tuesday. At that time, it is expected that the Fisher strike will be settled.

The closing of the Buick plant comes on the eve of the presentation of a new model. The rate of pay for piecework on bodies for the new model was one of the avowed causes for dissatisfaction among union employes of the Fisher plant.

The Fisher union workmen walked out yesterday afternoon and union leaders said that fewer than 100 men returned to work this morning.

Treasury Receipts.

Washington, May 11 (AP).—The position of the treasury May 9: Receipts, $138,010,697.60; expenditures, $152,566,292.93; balance $2,153,596,519.50. Customs receipts for the month, $8,177,117.69. Receipts for the fiscal year (since July 1) $2,606,310,912.77; expenditures, $6,069,695,687.62 (including $2,372,061,000.62 of emergency expenditures); excess of expenditures, $2,461,384,174.65. Gold assets, $7,756,121,299.83.

Frederick Snyder Predicts Many Changes In World During This Year

World Traveler and Noted Lecturer Guest Speaker at Kiwanis Inter-Club Meeting Thursday Evening—Many Nearby Cities Represented at Gala Affair—Kiwanis New York District Governor Present.

In the role of a prophet, predicting the downfall of Hitler, more cordial relations with Japan, little increase in business conditions until the rest of the world improves conditions, great danger to the United States from a nearby and little suspected country, a scientific discovery that will change the lives of men, and other word topics, Frederick Snyder, world traveler and noted lecturer, spoke at the inter-club meeting of the Kingston Kiwanis Club at the Governor Clinton Hotel Thursday evening to a large gathering of Kiwanians and friends. Guests were present from Newburgh, Poughkeepsie, Middletown and Port Jervis. Among the guests of honor was Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman.

The meeting was honored with the presence of George McKee of Mount Vernon, Kiwanis governor for New York state, who was introduced by Past President Howard R. St. John, and who spoke briefly. He told the Kiwanians about the definite policy which had been adopted for the publication of the Kiwanis Bulletin, under which reports and contributions must be in between the 11th and 15th of the month, and the magazine will be "put to bed" on the 15th. Each lieutenant governor will be asked to take care of one issue of the Bulletin. Mr. McKee also discussed the membership development plan and said that reports up to April 1 showed a net increase of 78 members. The coming international cnovention, to be held in Toronto, June 10-14, which it is hoped will attract around 1,000 Kiwanians, was referred to and the governor told of arrangements that

Roosevelt Calls For Showdown on Debts, Payments Not Enough

Johnson Act Bars Financial Transactions With Debtor Nations—Phillips Serves Notice On Five Major Powers $175,000,000 Due U. S.

Washington, May 11 (AP).—President Roosevelt, because of four little words tucked into the Johnson Act, has called for a showdown in the international game of war debts.

Word circulated through diplomatic channels that further token payments on June 15 would fail to ring up "no default" sign on the treasury's register. The doors of America's money markets, under the Johnson act, are slammed shut on all defaulting nations.

The act bars financial transactions with any country "in default in the payment of its obligations," and adds the four words: "or any part thereof."

Envoys of at least five debtor nations, it was learned in authorative quarters, have been informed by William Phillips, under secretary of state, that although this country would be delighted to receive any payments they cared to make on June 15, tokens would be accepted merely with "thanks."

The decision means that unless there is a new deal in the debt lineup—and the president left the door open for negotiation—thirteen nations must pay a total of $175,000,000 due this country on June 15 as coming within the purview of the new law.

The French and Belgian ambassadors were informed of that resolution on behalf of the President when they called at the state department Wednesday. The Italian, German and Czechoslovakian envoys were given similar information yesterday.

Surprise at the stunning answers they received to questions long considered routine left the diplomats without speech for publication.

In some well usually informed quarters the suggestion was made that the entire story of the envoys state department visits is not yet told. The President, thay assert, has not flatly rejected the token payment idea but has let the foreign nations know that payments in full or in large installments might form the basis of debt readjustments that would be beneficial to all nations concerned.

Italy May Not Make War Debt Payment

Rome, May 11 (AP)—Italy may not make any war debt payment at all in June, said official circles today, in consequence of the United States' notification that it will accept a token payment but that countries paying "tokens" will be considered in default.

These authorities said the American announcement was equivalent of putting countries such as Italy and Great Britain, which demonstrated their good will by paying portions of the instalments, on the same level as such countries as France which refused to pay at all.

The Italian government, however, is awaiting further clarification of the matter before coming to a final decision.

Official circles were frankly puzzled over the apparent contradiction of the United States in accepting a part payment and, at the same time, declaring the payer to be in default.

Oppose Delay in Selecting Republican National Chairman

Group of Leaders Speak Out Against Suggestion That The Selection Be Deferred Until After The November Congressional Elections.

New York, May 11 (AP).—A group of Republican leaders came forward today in opposition to any delay in the selection of Everett Saunders's successor as national chairman.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., new head of the National Republican Club, and Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman from New York, spoke out against the suggestion of some Republicans in Congress that the selection be deferred until after the November congressional elections.

Other party leaders, including Senator Fess of Ohio, a former national committeeman; Representative Snell of New York, House minority leader, and George F. Getz, national treasurer, promptly endorsed the stand of Roosevelt and Hilles.

A man of strong executive ability, an "intensive organizer," is the sort of chairman which many of the Republican leaders are known to be favoring.

In this connection, it was noted that their sentiment reflects the view held by former President Hoover while still in the White House. His views on the selection of a chairman, it was stated, will be sought by members of the committee.

Differences have come to the fore over the time honored problems of geographical delineations and political thought.

Hilles, national committeeman from New York, who is expected to play an important part in selecting Sanders' successors, declared:

"There have been no elimination of candidates, no pledges, no committments, and members of the National committee who have a sense of responsibility to the party must agree on some one who will unite all elements of the party."

One of the first names to be considered after Sanders' announcement of his coming resignation, was that of Representative Chester Bolton of Ohio. Bolton is chairman of the Republican Congressional committee.

Within the last 48 hours there have been mentioned the names of former Representative Carl G. Bachmann of West Virginia and former Governor Wilber M. Brucker of Michigan.

In the east, former Senator Walter Edge of New Jersey has the backing of a group headed by United States Senator David A. Reed of Pennsylvania and former Senator Moses, the latter a bitter foe of Sanders.

Former Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana, was brought into the picture, reputedly by senate progressives who wanted a counter foil for Edge.

Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., Hilles, Frank Knox, publisher of the Chicago Daily News, and former Senator Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, are names mentioned in the east.

Iowa offers Hanford MacNider, former national commander of the American Legion; Harrison E. Spangler, national committeeman, and Senator Dickinson.

Others mentioned are Henry P. Fletcher of Pennsylvania, former ambassador to Italy, former Governor Kohler of Wisconsin; Walter S. Hallanan, committeeman from West Virginia; Senator McNary of Oregon; Patrick J. Hurley, former secretary of war; and in one instance, Frank Lowden.

ONCE POWERFUL LEAS NOW IN PRISON GARB

Raleigh, N. C., May 11 (AP)—Garbed in regulation striped uniforms, Luke Lea, former financial and political "czar" of Tennessee, and his eldest son, Luke, Jr., today faced the customary routine of newly-admitted inmates of state's prison. When the former colonel-senator-publisher and his son entered the arched gates of the penal institution here yesterday to serve sentences for violation of the state banking laws, the father became convict No. 29,408 and his son No. 29,409.

Speeding Negro Is Cause of Plenty of Excitement Today

Napoleon Robinson, a Negro of Albany, Driving a 1934 Buick, Arrested by Motorcycle Officer Bowers After Thrilling Chase—Other Cases in Police Court.

As Motorcycle Officer George Bowers was driving along Broadway at McEntee street he noticed a 1934 Buick car being driven down Broadway by a negro and turning his machine set after it to question him. As the negro saw the officer turn his machine and follow he stepped on the gas and shot down Broadway hill at top speed with the officer after him. Those who saw the car dash down Broadway estimated the speed at over 50 miles an hour.

At the corner of Broadway and West Strand the negro swerved the car around the corner with the brakes screaming loudly as he applied them. He took the corner on two wheels and shot around into Canal street and into Ferry street and on down the Strand to Ponckhockie at fully 70 miles an hour.

Driving down North street the negro turned into Delaware avenue and drove toward Kingston Point. This is a dead end street and he was soon overhauled by the officer.

When the car was searched a Colt automatic .32 calibre revolver, with three loaded shells was found in the car. The negro, who gave his name as Napoleon Robinson of 622 Broadway, Albany, said he did not know the gun was in the car. He was also unable to tell where he had got the car, but denied it was stolen. He later told Judge Culloton that while he was in Albany Thursday night a boy friend gave him the car to use. With Robinson was riding another negro.

Later in police court Robinson pleaded guilty to speeding 70 miles an hour and was fined $25. He was also fined $5 for not having a certificate of registration, and $5 for not having his driving papers with him.

On the charge of having a gun in the car he waived examination and was held to await the action of the grand jury. Bail was fixed at $500.

The local police sent a teletype message asking information about the Buick car and were informed that the license for it had been issued to Marian Schlesinger of 352 State street, Albany. Later the police sent another message asking fuller details as it was believed by the police here that the car was a stolen one.

Brooklyn Man Held.

This morning Antonio Cropanese, 26, of Brooklyn, was arrested by Officer Fallon on a charge of driving past the red traffic light at Clinton and Alvany avenues. He was also charged with not having a certificate of registration for the car he was driving or the necessary driving license.

The police sent out a teletype message and received a reply that the car Cropanese was driving had been reported stolen and that the license had been issued to John Schuster of Congers.

Judge Culloton deferred the imposition of sentence until Saturday morning.

Arrested for Speeding.

William Davis of Chichester, arrested Thursday on a charge of driving a Ford truck at 38 miles an hour on Albany avenue, was fined $5. Edward F. Wiberg of Harwich street, arrested on a charge of driving 44 miles an hour on Albany avenue, had his hearing adjourned to May 15.

John Burke of this city, arrested for public intoxication, received a suspended sentence.

Embt Fined $2.

Thursday afternoon Robert W. Embt of Varysburg was arrested at the Rondout Creek Bridge on a charge of driving without a certificate of registration. He was fined $2. Riding with him was a woman who gave her name as Mrs. Harriet W. Hanson of Buffalo. The car they were driving had been reported stolen from Buffalo on May 9. Inquiry over the teletype by the police brought forth the information that Mrs. Hanson had been reported missing from her home since April 20. The couple were not wanted on any charge the Buffalo police informed Kingston, but the husband, Walter Hansen, would come to Kingston after his car.

Fear Grows Hourly Over Mid-West Crops As Drouth Continues

Estimate Made That 12 Million Pounds of Dust Have Settled in Chicago—No General Relief in Sight Today.

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Apprehension over middle America's crop prospects grew hourly today.

Parched prairies and plains, long baked by a hot sun and swept by swirling choking "black blizzards" of dust, swelled the alarm of agrarian and city dweller alike.

The only ray of hope was the forecast of local showers tonight in Nebraska and North and South Dakota, and in Iowa tomorrow.

Elsewhere no relief was in sight.

"The weather," said the official forecaster, "will be fair almost generally Friday in the North-Central States, but unsettled conditions are likely in parts of the great plains area, with some prospects of local showers in that section by Friday night or Saturday."

Only Light Showers.

Light showers have fallen in the Chicago area—the first in twenty-eight days—and in Kansas, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Texas, but they were regarded as of little value. The Chicago board of trade took cognizance of the situation and the prices of all future deliveries of wheat skyrocketed five cents yesterday.

Whipped by strong winds, the dust clouds from the vast plains of western Canada swept across the border with undying intensity yesterday, befogging the entire area from Montana on the west, Texas on the south and the Ohio valley on the east.

Airplane Service Disrupted.

So thick were the floating sheets of real estate that airplane service between Chicago and St. Paul was interrupted. Pilots reported that the dust particles had invaded the upper portions of the air—as high as 10,000 feet, and were sweeping eastward at the rate of 60 to 100 miles an hour.

Experts said the "black blizzards" were without precedent in intensity and the area involved within the past twenty years.

Chicago's skyscrapers, which ordinarily loom before the eye at great distances, were virtually blotted from sight. How many thousands of tons of dust were involved could not be estimated. Air conditioning experts calculated 308,950 particles of dust to the cubic foot at the corner of Clark and Washington streets, in the heart of Chicago's loop.

Chicago's Dust.

One estimate was that some 12,000,000 pounds of dust had been swept into Chicago—four pounds for every man, woman and child in the city.

Many persons suffering from sinus and eye infections were sent hurrying to specialists for relief.

Blinded by dust, a woman was killed in a motor vehicle accident near Dupres, S. D. Another woman died at Sykeston, N. D. She was pinned beneath a chicken coop, blown over by the high wind.

Meanwhile crop experts agreed that the wheat crop had been impaired, and reports said that other crops had also suffered.

So serious was the water shortage in some localities that municipal embargoes were established on drinking water.

Nor was the central west alone in its aridity. Farmers near Cumberland, Md., prayed yesterday for rain. In the afternoon they got it.

Benedictine Hospital Celebrates on Sunday

Hospital Day Exercises Sunday Afternoon — Addresses Planned by Number of Prominent Kingstonians and the Rev. Dr. Orson O. Rice of Woodstock.

National Hospital Day will be observed with appropriate exercises on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Benedictine Hospital, and a very interesting and entertaining program has been arranged for the occasion. All babies who were born at the hospital within the past two years are invited and will be the guests of honor.

The Very Rev. John J. Stanley, president of the hospital, will preside, and addresses will be delivered by Mayor Conrad J. Heiselman, Thomas F. Crowley, M. D., the Rev. Dr. Orson O. Rice and Dr. Mark O'Meara, chief of the surgical department.

During the afternoon Frank X. Fitzgerald will sing solos accompanied by Ted Riccobono, and an orchestra will render an appropriate program of music.

This annual event at the Benedictine Hospital is always looked forward to with much interest by the general public. There has been a large number of babies born at the hospital duirng the past two years and it is expected that the majority of the babies and their parents will attend the exercises.

During the past two years many improvements and new equipment have been added to the Benedictine Hospital in the X-ray, operating rooms and maternity departments.

Sunday afternoon it is expected that there will be a very large attendance and the guests of the day will be welcomed by a reception committee consisting of the Benedictine Sisters, staff of the hospital, and members of the Ladies' Auxiliary who will conduct visitors through the various departments of the hospital. Refreshments will be served and useful souvenirs will be given to each baby born at the hospital during the past two years.

NEW TYPE STORM IS VISITING KINGSTON

Kingston experienced a rather unusual weather condition this morning. The sky took on an unusual color and there was a reddish brown overcast which nearly obscured the sun. Weather forecasters had predicted the condition, a brand new type of storm, a dust storm.

Weather experts said that a vast dust cloud, whirling across the parched fields of the mid-west, should cast a pall over this locality some time during the day. The dust, whipped by the wind from the drouth-ridden fields of the west, had reached the headwaters of the Ohio River last night. As it swept through St. Paul, Chicago and other cities yesterday, airplane visibility was reduced to less than a mile and many planes were grounded while the dust sifted into homes and business places. In the wake of the dust storm is coming cooler weather according to the forecasters.

Storm on Thursday Cost State a Million; One Death Reported

Combination of Rain, Hail And Lightning Injured Several And Did Enormous Property Damage—Small Tornado At Chenango.

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—One dead, several slightly injured and damage estimated close to $1,000,000 was the toll today of a widespread wind, rain, hail and electrical storm over New York state.

Abram Burkenbosch, 58, of Johnstown, was killed when a loose electric wire was blown about him as he left his home to warn children playing near it.

Edward Reese, 18, suffered a lacerated right leg when struck by falling timbers as his father's barn was blown down at Crum Creek.

Reports of other injuries stated none was serious.

Striking late yesterday afternoon, the storms spent themselves in quick fashion but not before damaging crops, buildings, telephone and power lines.

An electrical storm in the Watertown sector destroyed five buildings and killed many cattle. Barns were burned at Rodman, Black River and Morristown, flames leveled the home of Miss Maude Selter at Three Mile Bay.

What they described as a small tornado was blamed by Chenango Valley residents for their losses.

Many barns were demolished, cattle were trapped by falling timbers, trees were uprooted and communication facilities disrupted. Damage in the valley alone was estimated at several hundred thousand dollars.

Utica escaped severe damage, but telephone lines were crippled as rain short-circuited underground cables.

Farm buildings were destroyed and livestock killed in Morrisville, Hubbardsville, Leonardsville, Bridgewater, Ingram's Mills and Dolgerville. These villages reported the heaviest losses, while those nearby suffered less severely.

Saratoga Springs and the capital district also were hit. Several hundred trees were blown down in Saratoga and the race track fence was damaged considerably. Power lines littered the streets of Amsterdam, giving utility workers plenty of repair work.

3 Seized In Indiana Held as Bank Looters

Richmond, Ind., May 11 (AP)—Two men and a woman suspected by police of being members of a gang that held up several banks in Ohio recently, were arrested here early today after being routed out of a house by tear gas. They gave their names as Harry Hopkins, 22, of Jamestown, O., Vernon Taylor, 28, of Springfield, O., and Thelma Mitchen, also of Springfield.

Eight federal agents from Indianapolis aided local police in the capture. The agents were called last night when it was suspected John Dillinger, widely-sought desperado, or some of his recent companions, were held in the house.

The two men arrested were heavily armed. Besides $600 in cash, police found three revolvers, a submachine gun, a sawed-off shotgun and a high powered rifle in the house.

Local police said they believed the men were members of the band of men that held up a bank in Fostoria, O., several days ago. They said the men also were suspected of being members of the gang that held up a bank at Springfield, O., some time ago, during which a bank official was shot.

Insull Utters No Plea When He Is Arraigned, Release In Sight

Counsel Enters Plea Challenging His Seizure in the Harbor of Istanbul as Illegal and Refusing To Plead Him Guilty or Not Guilty—Security Companies Scheduling the Bond—To Hear State Charges.

Chicago, May 11 (AP)—Samuel Insull refused today to acknowledge the jurisdiction of the United States district court and uttered no plea to the charges of violating the bankruptcy act and using the mails fraudulently in selling his company stocks.

Brought from the county jail for his formal arraignment before Federal Judge Philip L. Sillivan, the elderly prisoner remained silent and aloof while his counsel entered a plea challenging his seizure in the harbor of Istanbul as illegal and refusing to plead him guilty or not guilty.

His fellow defendants on the bankruptcy charge, however, entered their pleas of not guilty, and Judge Sillivan, without discussing the value of Insull's contention, postponed the hearing until next Tuesday.

Insull immediately retired to the judge's chambers and his attorney, Floyd E. Thompson, announced that security companies were scheduling the $200,000 bond which would make unnecessary his return to the county jail.

For the first time since the retiring utilities executive quit Chicago two years ago for a hop, skip and jump across the Atantic and Europe, he came face to face in the court house with his former associates.

One by one they strode past him, leaning over for a handshake or a pat on the shoulder, while Insull remained seated. Notably missing was his young brother and protege, Martin Insull, who forestalled trail on the federal charges by the terms of his extradition from Canada and, awaiting trail by the state, has not yet come up from his Morocco, Ind., retreat to visit his elder brother.

At noon a surety bond for $200,000, already signed by Insull himself, was approved by U. S. District Attorney Dwight H. Green and signed by Federal Judge Sullivan. The bond was fur[illegible] by the Fidelity and Cas[illegible]pany of New York.

Insull was [illegible] hand by deputy sheriffs, who served warrants, aleging larceny and embezzlement from funds of the Mississippi Valley Utilities Investment Company, and took him to criminal courts building on the west side.

There property had already been scheduled toward the $50,000 bond required on the state charges, so that release was in sight.

Woman Is Held Today In Los Angeles Search For Gettle Captors

Sheriff Jubilant at Dragnet Capture and Predicts Early Solution of Oil Man's Disappearance—Identity of Woman Not Revealed.

Los Angeles, May 11 (AP).—The sheriff's office today announced the detention of a woman in connection with the kidnaping of William F. Gettle, millionaire oil man.

The woman, described as a brunette about 30 years old and fairly well dressed, fell into a police dragnet early this morning along with several other persons.

After apparently examining the woman at some length, Captain Norris Stensland, sheriff's office extortion expert, and a figure behind the solution of a number of other kidnaping cases here, said

"It looks hot, boys! I think we have something. It is possible that we will have this solved within five hours."

To Stenland's declaration, Blayney Matthews, chief of the district attorney's investigators, added that their inquiries gave "promise that we might have something important."

The woman was taken into custody by three police homicide officers in ferreting out haunts of the underworld. She was turned over to the sheriff and the district attorney's offices for examination but the officers who questioned her declined to disclose the nature of the information obtained.

Significantly it came several hours after Ernest E. Noon, lawyer for the kidnaped oil millionaire, upon returning from a 35-minute trip said at his offices he had obtained "very important information which may lead to the identification of the kidnapers." Whether there was a connection between the woman and his statement remained unanswered.

Air Service Extended.

New York, May 11 (AP).—American Airlines announced today extension of its services in the east, affecting Elmira, N. Y., Scranton, Pa., and the runs to Boston and Detroit. Beginning Monday, Elmira will be a scheduled stop at the New York-Detroit run. As soon as construction work at Scranton, Pa., airport is completed the line will inaugurate regular stops there in the same schedule.

Flashes of Life Sketched in Brief

(By The Associated Press)

Merely Kidnaping.

Ruston, La.—This business of kidnaping is a costly one, non-engineering students of Louisiana Tech learned.

They swooped down last week on their rival, Wayne Hill, king of the engineers ball. Now "Tech Talk," student publication, carries this advertisement:

"Needed: Cash from non-engineering students to pay for damage done in connection with the kidnaping of the king preceding the Engineers' Ball. Items included in this expense are: 17 stitches taken in the king's arm, hospital accommodations and a broken car window amounting to $1.75, signed P. P. Love unofficio chairman of kidnaping committee."

Fish, Bones Divorced.

Essex, Conn.—Those old inseparables—fish and bones—have been divorced by George K. Yoshida, veteran Japanese chef at an Essex club.

He is reputed to be the only person in this section able to remove the 400 or more bones in a shad without marring its appearance.

It used to take him two hours to do the job, but practice has reduced his time to 25 minutes.

Sober Sundays.

Rochester, N. Y.—Frank Gallipeau, 32, is sure he will stay out of trouble on Sundays—for six weeks, at least.

He was convicted of public intoxication after a Sunday of conviviality, but told the judge he was the sole support of his family.

So the judge gave him a six-weeks sentence and suspended it on week days to permit Gallipeau to continue working.

Hands Off!

Portland, Ore.—An ordinance to prohibit pretty entertainers from sitting in the laps of customers in restaurants and night clubs has been passed by the Portland City Council.

The measure provides that the girls must not come "in physical contact" with patrons. It awaits the signature of Mayor Joseph Carson.

Few and Far Between.

Memphis, Tenn.—Frank Baker, 74, and Mrs. Baker, 80, say they like good shows, but rarely find them to attend.

Thirty years ago they went to a theatre in St. Louis. Their next trip to a playhouse was to see two radio stars here a few days ago.

Steadfast.

Seattle—Just back from his honeymoon, John D. MacGillivray, 24-year-old assistant to Prosecutor Robert M. Burgunder, found himself assigned as a divorce proctor, while half a dozen women obtained decrees.

"No, I'm not a bit disillusioned about marriage," he said later.

Trifle, American Style

6 slices sponge cake
4 eggs
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 cups milk
¼ teaspoon vanilla
¼ teaspoon almond extract
4 tablespoons raspberry jam
2 egg whites
3 tablespoons confectioner's sugar

Beat eggs, add sugar which has been mixed with flour. Add salt, milk. Cook in double boiler until mixture thickens a little. Stir constantly. Place sponge cake in shallow dish. Cover with custard mixture. Beat whites until stiff. Add confectioner's sugar, beat until creamy. Roughly spread on custard. Spread with jam. Bake 3 minutes in hot oven to brown top. Cool and chill.

Ham Biscuits

2 cup flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
4 tablespoons lard
¾ cup milk

Mix dry ingredients. Cut in lard with knife. Mixing with knife add milk. When soft dough forms, pat it out until ½ inch thick. Spread with ham mixture. Roll up like jelly roll. Cut off ½ inch slices and arrange flat side up next to each other in a shallow greased pan. Bake 15 minutes.

Three Changes Made In Pulitzer Rules

Amended Regulations Governing the Annual Prize Awards Will Be In Effect Next Year When The Winners Are Chosen.

New York, May 11 (AP)—Three changes in the regulations governing the annual Pulitzer prize awards in letters and journalism have been made by the advisory board of the Columbia University School of Journalism, which this year overruled several of the juries' selections.

The amended regulations will be in effect next year when the winners are chosen.

Two of the changes, interpreted today as a move back to the spirit of the original will of the late Joseph Pulitzer, consist of the addition, in brackets, of the phrase, "preferably dealing with American life," in the novel and drama award clauses.

The third is an amendment in procedure, described today by Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, president of Columbia University, as follows:

Henceforth, the juries in each prize field will not be expected to make recommendations for the award of any prize. Instead, they will present an eligible list of candidates, with a statement of the reasons why the particular candidate is thought worthy of serious consideration.

These eligible lists will then guide the advisory board — the body charged by the Pulitzer will with the responsibility of recommending the names for awards—in making its definite recommendations to the trustees of Columbia University.

The changes were voted by the board at its recent annual meeting. At the same meeting, the board voted its recommendations for this year's awards.

Dr. Butler said that the regulations were amended to prevent misunderstanding on the part of the public.

Pulitzer wrote in the original will that the novel prize should go to the "American novel published during the year which shall best present the whole atmosphere of American life, and the highest standard of American manners and manhood"; but the part relating to "American life" and "American manners and manhood" was dropped from the clause, by vote of the advisory board, in 1931.

However, only twice, in the sixteen years the fiction prize has been awarded, has it gone to novels with foreign locale.

These were Thornton Wilder's "Bridge of San Luis Rey," the prize novel of 1928, and Pearl Buck's "The Good Earth," which won the award in 1932.

The Missing Rolls

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

"First of all," said Willy Nilly, "I will get things in good order. Then I will attend to my sticking-out, pointed ears. But perhaps I had better see that my automobile Two-Ways is in perfect condition before I do my ears.

"Then my house needs a fresh coat of paint after the winter storms, and my porch should be painted, too. The garden needs to be weeded, and I should do more planting.

"It is fortunate the circus people left so much behind in the way of food, but my nice garden won't be nice at all if I don't look after it.

"I haven't the backbone of a moth if I let anything interfere with my work now."

Everyone was busy in Puddle Muddle and Willy Nilly loved the quiet. They would be back before long to talk over what had been happening. But in the meantime it was wonderful to feel that a long day was ahead of him in which he could accomplish so much. He had the feeling everything would be in order before the summer was underway.

He was in the midst of cleaning his house when he heard a knock at the door.

"Who is there?" called Willy Nilly.

"Grandpa Galump," answered the voice. Willy Nilly's heart sank. Had his animals been bothering Grandpa again? It seemed as though they enjoyed teasing him because they knew it annoyed him so much.

"How are you today?" asked Willy Nilly hopefully.

"Very angry," was Grandpa's reply. "My rolls are missing."

Jacobs In Charge Of City Gardens

Will be General Supervisor of Relief Gardens This Year—One to be Located Downtown and One Uptown if Possible—Apply for Seed to Works Division on Pine Grove Avenue.

Roy Jacobs has been appointed general supervisor in charge of the home and work relief gardens here this summer, and all applications for seed must be filed with the Works Division of the TERA for municipal gardens not later than 5 o'clock Monday afternoon.

Plans are being made to locate one of the Municipal gardens uptown and the other downtown, and full details may be had at the Works Division office on Pine Grove avenue. Seeds are free to all relief cases and workers in the Works Division, and as the gardens bear the administration will have the right to deduct from the workers' wages the cost of the seeds furnished him.

Bride's Slashed Body Is Found In Trunk; Man's Son Is Sought

Railroad Worker's Son Thought Responsible for Death of Step-mother With Whom, It Is Said, He Was Friendly Before Marriage.

Philadelphia, May 11 (AP)—The slashed body of a bride has been found stuffed in a steamer trunk and police are seeking her stepson.

Jacob Hoge, 45-year-old railroad worker, told police that his son, Joseph, 21, sat on the trunk while awaiting an express man to remove it. The express man did not take it, police said, and in it the elder Hoge found the doubled body of his wife of ten months, Mary Hoge, 26. By that time Joseph had left the house.

Detectives quoted Hoge as saying that Joseph, eldest of his five children, formerly "kept company" with the woman who became his stepmother, and that the marriage caused family differences.

An ice pick and chisel, stained with blood, were found in the cellar. Investigators also confiscated a half-laundered shirt which they identified as Joseph's and recovered from an adjoining yard bloody garments belonging to Mrs. Hoge.

"Strange what could have happened to your mother," Hoge was quoted as saying he told his son. This was after Hoge returned from work last night and searched for her. The son, sitting on the trunk, remained non-committal, detectives said they were told.

Hoge left the house a second time to make inquiries and while he was away the unidentified express man called but went off without the trunk.

Returning after his son had gone, Hoge noticed the lid of the trunk was ajar and opened it. There was his wife, her face and chest slashed and a hole in the base of her skull.

THE SLOT MACHINE RACKET

The slot machine racket in Ulster county which has been taking large sums of money from those least able to squander it, including youths of tender years, at last appears doomed. Backed by the Esquirol-Robinson bill, for the elimination of this vicious gambling device, which was signed Monday by Governor Lehman, local police authorities intend to wipe out this gambling scheme in the county.

Ulster county is not the only section in the state that has been confronted with the slot machine nuisance, similar drives by police officials throughout the entire state being set to eradicate this racket from their respective sections.

When and if violators of this law are brought into court and convicted, quick and stiff sentences should be meted out by the presiding justices. Imprisonment of persons, found guilty of violating this law, will go a long way toward stamping out this racket for all time.

The new law makes it a misdemeanor to manufacture, sell, rent, possess or permit the operation of a slot machine and may be applied to the owners of property in which tenants have installed machines. Possession of a slot machine is established as maintenance of a nuisance and the former maximum penalty of $50 fine or six months' imprisonment is revoked, leaving the punishment to the discretion of the court.

There are many types of machines on the market today and proprietors of establishments, having a machine installed, in doubt as to its legality, should first have it removed immediately and then ascertain from the local police authorities, whether it is permissible to have the device legally under the new law. By following the advice given by the proper authorities, persons having devices will then know, whether or not, they should continue their use.

MOTHER'S DAY FOLLOW-UP.

Mother's Day observance is doubtless a fine thing. Mother deserves a little special attention and appreciation now and then. If she would rather have it spread through the year in smaller doses than all concentrated in one day, she is polite and says nothing about it. Much of the value of the day is lost, however, if it is observed merely by a sentimental effusion of gifts and compliments.

In his proclamation concerning the day President Roosevelt proposed that everything possible be done "through our churches, fraternal and welfare agencies, for the welfare of mothers and children who may be in need of the necessities of life." Why not follow up Mother's Day with adoption or improvement of mothers' pension laws? The maternity death rate in the United States is shockingly high. Why not support whatever work is being done to eliminate the causes of that high death rate? Let Mother's Day serve not only as a time to give mother, a bouquet and a box of candy, but also as a starting point for improving conditions that bear unduly hard on many mothers.

LESS WORK OR MORE GOODS.

Plunged into forced leisure, a great many of us don't know what to do with it. Says Prof. Jacob C. Meyer of Western Reserve University: "We are so used to working hard and long that we are unhappy with more leisure, unlike our European brethren, who have already learned its use, especially in France." If we don't want this leisure, he suggests, we don't really have to take it. As members of a puzzled society now debating the question, we have a choice between two things. We can accept the leisure imposed by shorter working hours to avoid large production, or we can agree to purchase and use more things than we now have. The latter process might be carried pretty far if we set our minds to it.

If we decide that we want more things we shall not only work somewhere near the old number of hours for a while longer, but we shall make more complete use of machinery, tapering down whenever we get tired of comforts and luxuries. The professor thinks there would have to be a government-supervised system of distribution to guarantee that everyone would get his share of the abundance. Quite an argument could be started about that, in almost any crowd. We haven't given much thought yet to the mechanics of a "philosophy of abundance."

HEART MURMURS

During the examination of recruits for overseas service it was the custom in the United States and Canada to reject those with heart murmurs. This was not because the examining physicians did not believe that many of these men were fit for active service but because the recruit might be rejected at a later date, thousands of miles from home, and the government would be put to all this expense for nothing.

Now heart murmers are a definite sign of heart disease in many, but not in all cases. If the knowledge that all heart murmurs are not serious was known to everybody, there would be many thousands of happier people in the world, because the fact that they know they have a murmur is a constant worry.

The commonest murmer is what is known as the systolic murmer, which occurs with the first beat of the heart, as the blood is pumped into the two large vessels, one carrying the blood to the lungs to be purified, and the other carrying the blood to all parts of the body.

In Annals of Internal Medicine, Drs. A. R. Freeman and S. A. Levine tell of an investigation in which they undertook to find out how often systolic murmurs occurred in the ordinary routine or everyday examination of patients, and under what conditions these murmurs were found.

Murmurs were graded according to their intensity or strength. A murmur of grade one intensity is the faintest bruit or murmur that can be definitely heard. A murmur of grade two is what the general physician would call a faint systolic murmur.

Twenty per cent of the patients studied proved to have systolic murmurs of grades one and two. The murmur was twice as common in females as males.

The systolic murmurs appearing at the base of the heart (uppermost as heart is pear shaped) while the patient held his breath, and those appearing after effort but not present before the effort, Drs. Freeman and Levine believe to be of no significance, that is, not true organic heart disease.

"The systolic murmur (murmur with the first beat) need not indicate serious disease, nor disease of the heart, but a heart murmur greater in intensity than grade one should be regarded with suspicion and receive further examinations."

If then, your doctor tells you that, although you have a heart murmur it is "functional," not organic, you should stop worrying about that murmur.

NEW EMPHASIS IS LAID ON HOME GARDENING

Ithaca, May 11—With the emphasis on home vegetable gardening more pronounced than ever in all parts of the state, the man with a bit of judgment and a sizeable garden need have no fear of starving, says Professor Paul Work of the New York state college of agriculture.

People who used to cultivate flowers and buy vegetables, he points out, are now planting peas, sweet corn, and carrots. And they like it.

Added to this are relief agencies who encourage planting in back yards and community gardens. The home lot is the best place, Professor Work states, because it is handy to work and to harvest. But many have no place, and need guidance and help. So the gardens that are sponsored by relief agencies, industrial plants, and others are usually grouped and supervised.

"One of the great resources of New York's 160,000 farms lies in their 108,000 gardens, with more than $5,000,000 worth of products," Professor Work avers. "The census counts farm value at $46 a garden, but a recent study of 270 farms in four countries showed $115 worth of products for a family of five at retail prices."

Other reasons for the new emphasis on home gardening this year listed by Professor Work include education and recreation. Few activities, he says, offer more training than gardening. Youngsters and their parents see nature, not dead but growing, and they learn to guide its forces as they become acquainted with plants, the weather, and soil.

Murder at MOCKING HOUSE

BY WALTER C. BROWN

SYNOPSIS: It seems obvious that the two men found shot to death in Pierre Dufresne's breakfast room, called each other and that one of them is the man who has been writing threatening letters to Dufresne. But Sergeant Harper has a different hunch, although neither Dufresne, his wife, nor anyone else can shed any light on the matter. Harper is about to question the household.

Chapter 15

INQUISITION

A FEW minutes later Mrs. Dufresne's sister arrived, with her husband, Richard Croyden. One had only to glance at Aline Croyden to recognize her as the sister of Sylvia Dufresne. Her hair approached an auburn shade rather than the golden blonde coloring of her sister.

Her features, too, though of the same distinctive beauty, had less of the fragile and ethereal quality. Her natural manner was more vigorous and forthright, though not lacking either in poise or graciousness.

Mrs. Croyden excused herself at the first opportunity to go upstairs and see if she could be of any service. Harper continued to talk with Richard Croyden. He found this brother in law of Pierre Dufresne a nervous, impulsive personality, but with an alert, incisive turn of mind.

He questioned the detective closely along lines which showed that he had a keen grasp of the essentials of the mystery and a bond of mutual liking and respect sprang up between him and the Sergeant of Detectives at their first contact.

It was not until later that the detective found out that Croyden was the famous concert pianist.

Croyden was not the only one who exhibited a strong interest in the strange mystery of the breakfast room. The chauffeur, Donaghy, listened intently and said nothing. And Harper was surprised to glance upward and find Dr. Ulrich standing near the head of the stairs, absorbed in the conversations below. He caught the detective's look and slowly backed away, with a sardonic gleam of the eye.

When Mrs. Croyden returned from upstairs, Harper mustered them all into the breakfast-room. They formed into two natural groups, facing the body in the chair. In one group were Pierre Dufresne, and Mr. and Mrs. Croyden. In the other were the two Whitmores, Andrews, and Donaghy.

The detective gave a brief summary of the situation, to which they listened in absolute silence. He demonstrated how the features had been altered by the disguise.

"Have any of you ever seen this man before?"

Pierre Dufresne looked on in stony silence.

"Have you, Mrs. Croyden?"

"I am sure I have not," she answered in a very small voice.

"Mr. Croyden?"

"No, Sergeant. Sorry I can't help you."

"Whitmore?"

The black-browed Mrs. Whitmore spoke up before her slow-minded spouse could pull his wits together. "No, we've never seen him," she answered, sharply.

"Perhaps your husband would prefer to answer for himself," Harper suggested, annoyed by her air.

"Well, I ought to know. We've been married twenty-some years, and if I didn't see him, John didn't see him," she shot back, her black eyes snapping.

"That's right, I don't know him," the slow-voiced John Whitmore replied, with a sheepish look.

"Andrews?"

The tight-lipped butler looked more glum than ever as he silently shook his head.

"Donaghy?"

THE handsome chauffeur had been the most interested member of the group. He looked long and carefully at the unidentified victim. "It seems to me I have seen this man somewhere before," he stated, slowly.

His deliberate words had the effect of a bombshell in that room. Harper caught the sudden tenseness, the sharp hiss of some one's breath, a catch that just missed being a gasp. His eye swept the group. Andrews' look was positively venomous. The detective scented something in the wind.

"Think hard, Donaghy. This is most important."

Joseph Donaghy held his pause to the limit, then he smiled and shook his head. "For a moment I thought I had it—something about the face. I'll try to remember, Sergeant. Maybe it will come back to me."

That was what Donaghy's words brought to Harper's ear, but it was as if Donaghy's real voice had been saying, "I know this man. That knowledge is dangerous to one of you. Will it be made worth while for me to forget?"

And more than one pair of ears was aware of the importance of both messages!

• • •

The following day, Wednesday, January 11th, dawned clear and cold. The heavy fall of snow had tapered off about midnight and there had been very little wind to disturb it afterward.

Harper, arriving for duty at Dufresne's house shortly after eight o'clock, noted with satisfaction the undisturbed condition of the white blanket surrounding the house. A caprice of Nature had contrived this smooth carpet to record a portion of the previous night's fantastic story and the detective proposed to make good use of it.

Harper found Mrs. Richard Croyden in the hall, deep in consultation with the black browed housekeeper, Mrs Martha Whitmore. Despite the late hour at which she had retired, Aline Croyden was serene and clear-eyed, and without a trace of fatigue. She wore a tailored morning dress and its sheer simplicity of line enhanced her air of youthful charm.

"Good morning, Mrs Croyden," Harper greeted her, and nodded pleasantly to the housekeeper.

Mrs. Whitmore returned a grudging nod and retreated to her domain in the rear of the house. "Good morning, Mr. Harper," Aline responded, with a cordial smile. "Or should I say 'Sergeant' Harper?"

The detective smiled with her. "Not unless you prefer it. There is a theory that the best way to address a Sergeant of Police is to call him 'Captain,'" he bantered, meeting her pleasant mood.

"That's a clever idea. I shall call you Mr. Harper and reserve the 'Captain' in case I should need it later," she said, teasingly. "You know, I have been quite surprised at your assistants. I had the idea that detectives were heavy-set men with clipped moustaches, that they always chewed on unlighted cigars and wore derby hats which they never removed, except possibly to sleep. Or do detectives ever sleep?"

"Somtimes for weeks at a stretch," Harper assured her with mock solemnity, "but when a big case comes along we have to get our sleep when, and if, we can find it."

MRS. CROYDEN dropped her tone of light raillery. "But I am keeping you from your work. I fear the others will not be down for some time yet. It was so late when we retired. My sister asked me to take charge of the household arrangements until she is able to be around again."

"She asked you?" Harper caught her up quickly. "Dr. Ulrich told me that Mrs. Dufresne was not to talk for several days."

Aline nodded. "Of course, Mr. Harper. I used 'talk' in a figurative sense. My sister has already arranged a system of communication. Whenever she has a question or a message she writes it down on a pad. It works out quite easily."

"By the way, how is Mrs. Dufresne this morning?"

"Poor girl, she's naturally greatly worried over the possibility of a scar, and then these tragic happenings are keeping her on edge."

Sergeant Harper and Mrs. Croyden entered the breakfast-room. Although the victims had long since been removed, the room retained a tragic and depressing aura that not even the bright morning light could dissipate.

There were those dark stains on the rug, for instance, and the unknown dead man's clothing piled on a chair, complete from the shoes to the beribboned nose-glasses. But the most characteristic seal of the police visitation were the numerous patches of dusting powders that had been sprayed here and there in the search for fingerprints.

"You certainly leave nothing to chance," Mrs. Croyden observed. "This morning I saw there was a policeman guarding Mr. Dufresne's room. Isn't that a rather unusual procedure, Mr. Harper? Surely, last night's events put an end to the danger?"

The detective shook his head. "This is an unusual case, Mrs. Croyden. We do not actually know that the man found in this room is the man who threatened Mr. Dufresne and attempted to kill him."

"But surely you have a theory? I thought the matter was quite clear."

Tomorrow, Harper plunges into the maze.

SAMSONVILLE

Samsonville, May 11—The Ladies' Aid met at the hall on May 3 and quilted their first quilt. Y. W. C. A. Planning For Budget Drive

At a meeting of the campaign captains held at the Y. W. C. A. on Thursday afternoon, final arrangements were made for the annual budget campaign, which begins on Monday evening, May 14. The goal this year will be $7,444 to carry on the work for the fiscal year of May 1934 to May 1935. This amount has meant the curtailment of the budget to the lowest figure at which the association can efficiently run and yet carry out the program needed for the girls and young women of Kingston.

The campaign committee, including the executive committee and the team captains, is composed of the following: Mrs. George F. Rice, president of the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Frederic Holcomb, finance chairman; Mrs. Joseph Fowler, Mrs. John W. Matthews, Mrs. A. Noble Graham, Mrs. W. C. Kingman, Miss Emily Hoysradt, Mrs. G. N. Wood, Mrs. Howard Lewis, Mrs. Alva Staples, Mrs. Cornelius Treadwell, Mrs. Charles Terwilliger, Mrs. Robin Stelle, Mrs. Myron Teller, Miss Ellen VanSlyke, Miss Beatrice Powley, Miss Annie K. Fuller, Miss Katherine Millard, Mrs. William M. Mills, Mrs. Frederick L. Coombs, Miss Caroline Port, Mrs. Kurt Wassen, Mrs. Harry Reiyea.

The drive will open with a dinner on next Monday evening at six o'clock at the Y. W. C. A. at which time all workers on the drive will be present to receive their final instructions.

Pad "Slip Covers"

Pretty slip covers can be made for the pads which you put under luncheon pieces. The pads, of course, protect the table from hot dishes and the luncheon pieces are a part of the table decoration; but pretty slip covers for the pads keeps them clean and fresh in appearance. These slip covers can be washed as often as you wish and made in such a way that they can be taken off or put on at will.

PATTY AND THE BEE

By ANNE CAMPBELL

PATTY weeps! She spies a bee
Buzzing in the room,
Running dolefully to me,
Little Pat supposes
I can keep her from the sting
Of that brown bee blustering.

If I were a yellow bee
And could choose between
Posies growing fragrantly
And my heart's true queen,
I'd know where to gather bliss!
It is Patty I would kiss!

The Clever Ostrich

The ostrich does not bury its head in the sand when pursued; it has the much cleverer plan of camouflaging itself. The natural home of the ostrich is the boulder-strewn veld. When in danger of capture, the bird sinks down and huddles itself up. With its smoke-gray feathers—their natural color before they are treated for export—the ostrich so closely resembles the many surrounding boulders that careful search is necessary to pick it out.

Bees and Grapes

In spite of apparent evidence to the contrary, bees are positively not able to pierce the skins of grapes. The part of a bee's body which inflicts its sting has nothing to do with the mouth parts, which are totally unadapted for biting purposes. The real culprits in grape destruction are birds which inflict the original wounds and the bees then flock to the scene in order to take advantage of the juice which is then available.

Plans Complete For Rotary Meet

Plans have been completed for the annual conference of the 28th district of Rotary International to be held in Glens Falls Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 17, 18 and 19. With several hundred Rotarians and their wives from all parts of the district, which embraces all of the Rotary clubs in Eastern New York state as well as Bermuda, expected to attend, the Glens Falls club is putting forth every effort to make the conference outstanding in Rotary club annals.

Election of a new district governor to succeed C. Reeve Vanneman, of Albany, present leader of the district, will be the climaxing feature of the conference. The election will be held on Saturday morning at the final session.

Glens Falls which had a district governor several years ago in the person of J. Thacher Sears, headmaster of the Glens Falls Academy, is not favored to again win the highest honor Rotary clubs of the district have to offer. The likelihood is that it will be a number of years before the title returns to that city.

Session at The Queensbury.

Fred C. Beimer, general conference chairman, has announced details of the program which has been arranged for the conference. All sessions will be held at The Queensbury, the modern new hotel, one of the finest in New York state.

Registration will open at 9 o'clock Thursday morning, May 17. Both Rotarians and "Rotary Anns", as the members' wives are known, will register and receive an official badge. At noon the visitors will join the Glens Falls Rotarians at their regular weekly luncheon.

During the afternoon of the first day, the Glens Falls Country Club will be the scene of a golf match and bridge tournament for men and women. At 7 o'clock a dinner will be held at The Queensbury, followed by a cabaret entertainment at which a diversified program is to be presented.

Business On Friday.

Friday's program will open with a group of breakfast conferences at 8:15 o'clock, the delegates choosing for themselves which conference they will attend.

Among the prominent men of the Rotary movement scheduled to speak during the morning are Walter D. Head of Montclair, N. J., headmaster of Montclair Academy and chairman of the International Relations committee of Rotary International, on the subject of "International Relations," and J. Murray Hill of Bowling Green, Ky., a director of Rotary International Aims and Objects committee, on "Aims and Objects."

Trip to Ticonderoga.

An informal luncheon at noon Friday will be followed by a trip for both men and women to historical points in the vicinity of Glens Falls.

The governor's banquet and ball, outstanding of all the conference social events, will bring the day's activities to an end. A tribute to District Governor Vanneman, the event will have as its principal speaker Representative Hamilton Fish, Jr., of the 26th Congressional district of New York. Entertainment, card playing and dancing will follow. The banquet and ball will be informal in nature.

Saturday morning will be devoted to the election of the new district governor and the completion of other conference business. The conference will come officially to a close following a luncheon at noon, at which there will be no speaker.

Registrations already made indicate that the Conference will be largely attended.

Ancient Mexican Race Traced.

Toluca, Mexico, (AP).—New traces of the ancient Indian races which inhabited Mexico have been discovered by Dr. Jose Garcia Payon only five miles from this city, capital of the state of Mexico. The findings include a cruciform temple, with a circular wall decorated with a freize of human heads, and a huge monolith weighing more than two tons.

Germany Takes Tippler Census.

Berlin, (AP).—A census of confirmed drunkards reveals that in 74 German cities with 19,000,000 total inhabitants, there are 47,262 dipsomaniacs under treatment, says the "Deutsche Gemeindetag."

KNIGHTS TO DROP FREE TICKETS FOR GYPSY JIM

This afternoon and again on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock Harper Molyneaux, local pilot of the Kingston Airport, will take aloft Ray Carraghan, business manager of the play "Gypsy Jim," who will scatter from the sky a number of free tickets to this vivid and entertaining show. The complimentary tickets will be noticeably marked so keep your eyes peeled toward the sky on Friday and Saturday afternoon. The finders may present these tickets at the Kingston High School Auditorium, the night of the play, Friday, May 18, before 8:30 o'clock. The signature of the Grand Knight of the local Council will be imprinted on the back of each free ticket.

This novel method of advertising is fully in keeping with the character of "Gypsy Jim," who in the play uses just as novel ways of spreading faith.

BISHOP GILBERT CONFIRMED AT HIGH FALLS CHURCH

High Falls, May 10—On Rogation Sunday, the Right Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, D. D., bishop suffragan of New York, confirmed a number of young people in St. John's Church, High Falls. The bishop preached a stirring sermon, stressing the necessity of church going, and the need of every church member to be loyal to his church.

Those who were confirmed last Sunday will make their first Holy Communion next Sunday morning, on the Feast of Pentecost, at a sung eucharist to be celebrated at 8 a. m.

Get $7,088,846.04 In Liquor Taxes

Albany, May 11—New York state has collected $7,[illegible] in taxes on beer, wine and liquor since the sale of these beverages became legal, Deputy Commissioner Louis [illegible], director of the beverage tax bureau, reported to Mark Graves, commissioner of taxation and finance, today.

Beer, which has been sold subject to the state tax of 2 1-2 cents per gallon since April 1, 1933, is responsible for $5,[illegible]. The gallonage reported is 152,[illegible].

The sale of liquor since December 5, the date of repeal of the prohibition laws, has resulted in tax payments of $1,[illegible]. This sum represented a levy of one dollar per gallon.

Other sources are as follows: Sparkling wine, $42,861.98; still wine, $123,152.51; additional tax, $6,621.05 and penalties, $2,121.87. Of the total $7,[illegible] represents tentative payments on which gallonage cannot be determined until complete returns are filed. Not included in the total is the amount collected by the alcoholic beverage control board for license fees, etc.

"The state is losing a considerable sum by retailers buying direct from out-of-the-state distributors, thereby evading the tax. We are acting immediately to plug this leak and unless the tax is paid on these imports we shall be required to compel hotels, clubs, restaurants and all other dealers to register with the tax commission as distributors."

Moscow Seeks Foreign Students.

Moscow, (AP).—The All-Union Society for Cultural Relations Abroad, known as "VOKS" for short, and the "Intourist" are organizing one-month summer courses for British and American students at the First Moscow State University. Lectures will be varied by trips to various parts of the Soviet Union.

CLEANING

The Endless Job of Housekeeping

IS LARGELY A FIGHT AGAINST DIRT

WOULDN'T you say that at least 75% of the work of keeping house is the struggle for cleanliness? If this is true, every aid you can summon to make cleaning easier will save your own time and strength. Soap and hot water are, of course, your chief allies. Why not make greater use of both?

In this region, new low rates for both gas and electricity have been designed particularly to permit homes a greater use of hot water, supplied automatically in ample quantities, at very little increased cost. The total cost of all the hot water used in the average family for twenty-four hours, with an efficient automatic storage water-heater is only 15c, on an average.

How much will a good automatic heater itself cost? Well, 50c per week, or less, will pay the purchase price.

Landscape Artist—That is a sun-dial.

Landscape Artist—That is to tell the time of day. The sun moving through the heavens casts a shadow which is recorded on the dial, indicating the time of day.

Mrs. Newrich (beaming with interest)—My goodness! These modern inventions! What will they be thinking of next?

We know a girl who is so dumb she thinks a thimble is one of those things that goes on the top of a hip flask.

A manager of a concern was presenting a purse and a watch to one of the employes who was leaving the concern. The purse and watch were gifts of the other employes. After a long flattering speech, the manager wound up with: "The contents of this"—holding up the purse, —"may in time disappear. But"—holding up the watch—"here is something that will never go."

Joe—I've just come from a dog show.

Sam—Did you win a prize?

Never bother about the man who calls you names to your face, but beware of the "bird" who goes around and talks about you behind your back.

Wife—Why does the whistle blow for a fire?

Husband—It doesn't blow for the fire, it blows for water. They've got the fire.

No matter what you do, somebody always knew you would.

Guest—Is this hotel run on the American or European plan?

Clerk—American plan, sir, any of the bell-boys will supply you with liquor.

Why give the devil his dues when most people have to pay for them?

Man (to small son of one of his workmen who has met with an accident)—When will your dad be fit for work again?

Boy—Can't say for certain, but it will be a long time.

Man—What makes you think that?

Boy—'Cause compensation's set in.

Some men get away with anything they do—others just do the things they can get away with.

Tourist—What's in here?

Guide (leading the way into a morgue)—Remains to be seen, sir.

Daddy says buying gifts for mother is just about as difficult as trying to pick out something appropriate for the Unknown Soldier.

Son—Dad, I'll be good if you'll give me a dime.

Dad—Junior, to be a son of mine you must be good for nothing.

Texas Wild Hog, Once Domestic, Attacking Men

Midland, Tex (AP)—Only one west Texas animal, long-time residents say, will attack man without provocation. It is the wild hog, numbers of which are reported roaming the sandy reaches of Ward county in the far southwest corner of the state.

Fierce sows with litters attack men at times. They battle with such deadly effect that hungry coyotes and wolves are unable to seize any of their young.

Originally domesticated, the animals were turned loose before maturity in the shinnery (dwarf oak) region to fatten on "mast," or acorns. Cowboys rope those they wish to kill, but when one unexpectedly flushes a mother and her young, the sow does not hesitate to charge the horse and its rider.

The sows band together in groups of three or four, quickly forming a circle when a prowling animal attempts to slip into the herd and snatch a pig. Fighting savagely with razor-like tusks, the sows are a match for any predatory beast of the region.

KINGSTON O. E. S. HAD VISIT FROM OFFICERS

Kingston Chapter No. 155, O. E. S. held its regular meeting Friday evening, May 4, at which time they were honored by the official visit of Right Worthy Gertrude Coutler, district deputy grand matron, and Right Worthy Walter G. Peterson, assistant grand lecturer of Greene-Ulster District. Preceding the meeting a banquet was held at the Stuyvesant Hotel after which all adjourned to the lodge rooms which were beautifully decorated with palms and cut flowers.

The worthy matron, Florence Schoonmaker, extended both a cordial welcome. Jessie Wolferstelg sang a song of welcome. A large crowd from various chapters was present. The officers then gave "The Hours of the Day." They presented the deputy with a large bouquet of flowers.

The entertainment, very pleasing to all, was as follows: A duet by Jessie Wolferstelg and Eva Clinton; a vocal solo by Alice Trowbridge; a colored sketch by Edna Renn and Harriett Holmes; a vocal solo by Miss Ruth Neal, accompanied by Marie Terrill Gifford; a vocal solo by Robert Hawksley, accompanied by Marie Ferrill Gifford. A social hour and refreshments closed the program.

A Washington Daybook

By HERBERT P[illegible]M

WASHINGTON—If the ardent and enthusiastic silver bloc in congress could by one [illegible] another act President Roosevelt to forget the word "permissive" as regards monetary legislation, most of their troubles would be over.

There is, for example, his reported will[illegible] congress to enact legislation increasing the ratio of silver to gold to a p[illegible] of 30 to 70. The present ratio is 12 to 88.

On the face of it the proposal appears to be a lib[illegible] concession on the part of the President. When boiled down it's another story altogether.

Even Senator Thomas of Oklahoma, one of the most ardent of silver advocates, admits as much. His laconic statement that the proposal is "safe" aptly expresses his views.

Thomas thinks it's "safe" because he is convinced the President has no intention of embarking immediately on a huge silver purchase program.

• • •

'Permissive' Authority

AS a matter of fact Mr. Roosevelt has indicated his position is exactly that. It is his idea to build up the silver reserves gradually and as the administration sees fit—"permissive" authority, if you please.

The ratio of 30 to 70 is the result of an agreement reached at the London economic conference. It was agreed there that the reserves against a nation's money should normally be 75 per cent of gold and 25 per cent of silver. However, a proviso was inserted that in times of emergency the ratio could be changed to 70 per cent of gold and 30 per cent of silver.

Apparently Mr. Roosevelt is ready to accept the proposal laid down at London—with provisos of his own.

• • •

High-Priced Silver

WITH the present ratio between the two metals at 12 to 88, any attempt to bring it quickly to 30-70 obviously would mean that the government would have to acquire tremendous silver stocks immediately. Some contend—silverites included—it couldn't be done; that even if it were attempted silver would soar to a price not reached in years.

More simply stated, the 30-70 ratio as such is perfectly acceptable to the silver people, but they know there is little or no opportunity for its attainment.

Therefore a continued clamor for "mandatory" legislation such as the Goldsborough bill, which would set up a permanent monetary authority, and the compulsory silver-purchase amendment, may be expected.

The President already has "permissive" authority to do things with money and currency which he has not used. What the silverites want is a showdown.

PRESIDENT ALBERT LEBRUN GODFATHER TO 497 CHILDREN

Paris, (AP).—Baby kissing is not confined to mayors of American cities. President Albert Lebrun is godfather to 497 children and as such has to do some baby kissing himself.

Baby kissing for him, however, is an exclusive affair. In order to be a godchild of France's president one must be at least the eighth living child of one's parents.

Once, however, one is the eighth child sailing is comparatively easy. One has only to make sure that one's parents are above reproach as to morality and honorability and of French nationality.

President Lebrun has been in office two years and has accumulated 497 godchildren. At this rate he should be godfathering more than 1,500 when his term expires in May, 1939.

HOLLYWOOD SIGHTS AND SOUNDS

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—The function of the screen should not be "mere entertainment."

A medium so influential in its social effects as to transform the world's idea of feminine beauty in the space of a few years should not be wasted on hackneyed plots and fluffy romantic balderdash.

There is "box-office" in ideas, in dramatizations of "the burning questions of the hour." . . .

These expressions, it need not be stated, did not come from film exhibitors in convention assembled in Hollywood, vociferously airing their grievances against the local producers.

They came from G. W. Pabst, a distinguished German director who arrived in Hollywood expecting to repeat here his successes abroad. As might be surmised, Hollywood with its own box-office convictions firmly settled was not too interested. Pabst made one firm according to Hollywood specifications, and forfeited his contract. The pay-check, he said, is not everything.

His Films Famous Abroad

The pictures for which Pabst is famous in Europe have not generally been shown in this country. Only one of them, "The White Hell of Pitz-Palu," attained widespread distribution here. For his "Kameradschaft" he was awarded the French Legion of Honor.

It is his opinion that millions are staying away from movie theaters because they are no longer entertained by what is generally considered film "entertainment," that these millions could be brought back if they were given pictures that dealt with live issues, that gave them something to think about and remember.

Varieties Of Entertainment

Entertainment? Certainly, he says. Only there are different kinds of entertainment. There is the absorbing power of Tolstoi, which he prefers, and the kind afforded, say, by Edgar Wallace, whose writings bore him.

Pabst has not given up. He is confident he can make his kind of pictures in Hollywood. He has written a story, in fact, in which one studio is interested. That is not too surprising, for his pictures, while imbued with ideas, have not been dull and stodgy treatises.

This new one, he admits, even may be made as a musical comedy—but it has a social background, and deals with a lively question—one, incidentally, that does not fall in with any cycle of which the exhibitors complained.

MT. TREMPER

Mt. Tremper, May 11—The roast beef supper served at the Mt. Tremper Church Hall by the Ladies' Serving Society on Wednesday, May 9, was a financial success and was greatly relished by those present.

On Tuesday night at 10 o'clock many of the inhabitants of Mt. Tremper were called to the three forest fires which broke out up in Dobbin Hollow. The first two were on the Blair place, and the third on the John Boerker place. Among those who responded to the alarm were John Zauner, fire warden; George Byron, Jr., Richard Byron, Louis Lane, John Gardner, Burton Gardner, Howard Schaff, Norman Wilber, Jr., and Waldo Boerker.

Mrs. Marie Zauner, Mrs. W. Bagnall, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Soden, "Billie" Ryder and "Wally" Bagnall spent the week-end at the Zauner homestead.

On Saturday evening, May 12, the Mt. Tremper P.-T. A. will hold its regular meeting at the school house at 8 o'clock. All parents are urged to attend, whether members or not, to see what is being planned for the welfare of the children.

It was reported that 15 Grangers have already made reservations for the Highland trip on May 15.

Kingston: "This Man Is Mine." Drawing room characterizes this excellent comedy-society picture and it is worth seeing because of its absolute naturalness, its charm and its enjoyable dialogue. Irene Dunne, Kay Johnson, Ralph Bellamy, Constance Cummings and Sidney Blackmer all do well in skin fitting roles. The story centers around a happily married young couple, with everything blissfully happy until the husband's former girl come to town and decides she must win him away from his wife once again. She succeeds, but the wife takes and turns the tragic situation into its rightful solution. Good entertainment.

Orpheum: "Frontier Marshall" and "Notorious but Nice." George O'Brien cracks down on the evils of a border town in this slam-bang talkie of strong men and adoring women. Mr. O'Brien seems an ideal western hero with his handsome profile and Lionel Strongfort appearance. The show lacks a single dull moment and is filled with lively adventure. Irene Bentley is the girl. "Notorious but Nice." The funniest thing about this show is the title. The picture is a bit musty with age but it has its occasional moments. The plot is spun about young ladies whose reputations are supposed to be tarnished. Marion Marsh and Betty Compson head the cast.

Broadway: "Vaudeville" and "She Made Her Bed." "George Lovett's concentration song and mind reading novelty" heads the vaudeville bill of four special acts, and along with Mr. Lovett's offering the Broadway Theatre offers the work of "Frank and Ethel Carmen," "Raymond and Ann," and "Jeff Sayre and Company." One of the biggest features of this bill is its unusual diversity. "She Made Her Bed." The entertaining adventures of a young wife disgusted with her husband's bullying disposition and 100 per cent infidelities. She decides to go away with a handsome young friend who loves her but domestic complications cause trouble. This show is filled with laughs and surprises. For example, there is a big fire at a crucial moment and a tiger runs around loose in the final moments of the show. Richard Arlen, Robert Armstrong and Sally Eilers head the cast.

Tomorrow

Kingston: "We're Not Dressing." If you look hard enough, you will discover that this musical study in human conduct was adapted from J. M. Barrie's "The Admirable Crichton." When Sir James Barrie wrote this popular satire on the social order he probably never dreamed of seeing it set to music, but here it is with the crooning Bing Crosby in the starring role. And what's more, it's exceptionally good entertainment, with many a gay laugh, a hilarious situation, etc., and Mr. Crosby sings his heart out in a group of new song hits written for the picture. In this show, Mr. Crosby is a common but tuneful sailor aboard the yacht of wealthy Carole Lombard. His job is to sing to Miss Lombard's pet bear, and he makes the most of it. Of course, he loves Miss Lombard with a deep devotion, but the social order keeps them as far apart as the planets. When the ship is wrecked on a tropical isle, the order changes. This talkie is good for many reasons. The first is the excellence of the cast. Supporting Mr. Crosby are such talented performers as Leon Errol, Ethel Merman, George Burns and Gracie Allen, Jay Henry, John Irwin and Charles Morris. It also has excitement, humor, intelligent direction and some very pleasant music. Worth seeing.

'Dr.' Doumergue Cheerful As Old Fashioned Remedies Ease French Economic Ills

By JOHN EVANS

Paris (AP). Premier "Papa" Doumergue feels he has a good start in curing his people's troubles.

All were asking "What's the matter with France?" to which Doumergue answered:

"Politics! Finance! — Dwindling business!"

Having diagnosed the ailment he is prescribing the old fashioned remedies of hard work, sacrifice and discipline.

His cure for politics is to eliminate them.

His treatment for money trouble is a balanced budget and faith based on good works.

His medicine for poor business is to reduce cost so customers can buy.

In Roosevelt's Steps.

Radio fan that he is, the premier has taken a cue from President Roosevelt. He sits down for "talks" with his people in the first broadcasts any French government chief ever has made.

Bluntly the former president of the republic, who came from retirement to stop bloodshed and "save France," warns his "friends" listening in, of "civil war" and the danger of "foreign invasion."

When ministers or others complain his road is too hard, he threatens to return to his country home at Tournefeuille and let them shift for themselves. He smiles but means it.

Politics have been cured momentarily at least by forming a cabinet of all parties, with the ministers pledged to political peace. Each is charged with keeping his followers quiet. In time, Doumergue thinks, all will learn the forgotten lesson of cooperation.

Uses Scalpel On Budget.

Bad finances came from growing budget deficits and the unrest that combined to make people hoard their money and refuse to renew bonds. As the French government has a large floating debt and has long lived partly on borrowed money, three times in little more than a year there have been treasury crises.

Twice the government has had to borrow abroad, last year in London and recently in Amsterdam.

Doumergue, exacting decree powers from parliament, balanced the budget, on paper at least, by reducing expenses, largely through trimming the pay of 800,000 government employes and pensioners. He saved the equivalent of $264,000,000.

Aside from the budget deficit there is a railroad deficit of about the same amount guaranteed to the government. Doumergue ordered much reorganization, [illegible] costly [illegible] often maintained solely for political reasons.

People Exhibit Confidence.

When the people saw the premier was cleaning the house a [illegible] withdrawals from savings banks slackened and renewal of short-time bonds gave the government [illegible] to operate.

Reestablishment of peace and of faith in the government, even the premier recognizes, still depends on the effectiveness of the measures taken and very much on the punishment of the guilty in the Stavisky case in which the public was swindled of something like $16,500,000.

Involved in the scandal are murders and suicides, corrupt practices in the government, parliament and the judiciary, and the admitted criminality of a group in the famous "surete generale", the French secret service.

Police Seen As Gangsters.

Albert Sarraut, minister of the interior, weeks ago declared there was a "Mafia" at work in France, served by a band of assassins. The "surete generale" is accused of working with and even of being a part of this mysterious gang.

When the storm broke, France realized suddenly she had gangsters, who needed no lessons from the American underworld.

Business is the present pressing problem of the "save France" cabinet. Industrial leaders think things have hit bottom but each month for a long time the trend has been downward.

Costs are so high France finds it difficult to compete abroad.

High costs reduce consumption at home.

Reduced consumption tends to maintain if not increase prices because France is a country of small merchants and as the business volume decreases each proprietor needs larger profits to make a living.

Hopes To Meet America.

Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, recently recognized French prices as "20 to 30 per cent" above world levels.

Doumergue is trying to deflate. He believes he can force prices down and that the United States will force prices up on world markets so the two will meet and France can do business again.

Critics of this program comment that budget economies, railroad reorganization and price reduction never can be fully realized and that it will be a year before appreciable results can be obtained.

Scientists urge placing hospitals and homes at points where temperature and moisture are unfavorable to insects and small animal pests.

Agricultural experts figure that $56,000,000 worth of farm products which Georgia could grow are being imported by that state annually.

Talks to parents

The Unforeseen

By BROOKE PETERS CHURCH

The problem of what to do with a very young child when its parents wish to go out at night is an acute one at times in some families.

Mrs. Smith was a devoted mother and took excellent care of her two-year-old boy. The only vacation she allowed herself was an occasional jaunt to the movies with her husband. They always saw to it that the little boy was sound asleep when they left and that every possibility of danger from fire had been eliminated. But there is always an off chance that no one expects. One night Tommy had an attack of croup and was nearly strangled to death when they reached home.

Some parents manage to leave their children alone night after night with no bad results, but sometimes the practice has resulted in fatal catastrophes. Sometimes a fire occurs in spite of every precaution; sometimes the baby wakes up and falls out of his crib; sometimes he is badly frightened.

It seems an unnecessary hardship on parents to sacrifice all their good times together because of children who, sound asleep, probably will never suffer in any way from being left alone. But it is the unforeseen that must always be guarded against in caring for children.

In many cases the child could be taken along without any harm to it, in others it might be left with a neighbor or in a day nursery. Often a little team-work among the parents would solve the problem. If the Joneses would watch the Smith baby on Tuesday, the Smiths would do as much for the Joneses on Thursday. There are a dozen ways in which the question can be answered. If none of these is satisfactory, it is better to give up the outing than to leave the baby at the mercy of possible trouble.

CHURCH ACTIVITIES IN ROSENDALE PARISH

Rosendale, May 11.—A group of young men of Rosendale met at All Saints' Vicarage on Monday evening, at which time the "Young Men's Club of Rosendale" was formed. Yellow Crested Cockatoo

The yellow crested cockatoo is a common sight in Australia, where it causes much damage to newly sown grain. It is characterized by a crest of feathers on the head which can be raised at will. In Australia the cockatoos live in flocks in the woods. They feed on fruit, seeds, and insects. The birds have harsh voices. They belong to the parrot family.

POPPIES AMONG POPULAR FLOWERS WITH GARDENERS

Short Blooming Season Balanced by Color Brilliancy, Lua A. Minns Says

Ithaca, N. Y., May 11—Poppies rank among the most popular flowers in cultivation, says Lua A. Minns of the New York state college of agriculture, who points to the long lists of varieties and the many pictures in seed catalogs as evidences of their popularity.

"True poppies do not have a long season of bloom," she notes, "but balance this defect by their brilliancy of color and delicacy of texture. The best known are the annuals, the corn poppy and the opium poppy.

"The more common type from European fields is known as the Flanders Field' poppy and is bright red in color. It usually has a dark spot at the base of each petal. But the kinds grown in gardens range from pure white, through all the tints and many shades of red to purplish. The best known strain is the Shirley poppy, in delicate or brighter colors, edged with white.

"Another annual poppy of equal importance ornamentally, and even more commercially, is the opium poppy that is grown in quantity in the Orient as a source of opium.

"Annual poppies are easy to cultivate," Miss Minns says. "Sow the fine seeds where the plants are to bloom, since they do not transplant well, on well-prepared, but not too heavy soil. This may be done in late autumn, early spring, or later, as they are very hardy. Once a start is made, they will self-sow from year to year. Thin the seedlings, weed until they cover the soil, and let them care for themselves.

As for perennial poppies, Miss Minns says no flower can be more colorful, more bold, and more flaunting than the Oriental poppy. She calls it a matchless poppy for late May and June.

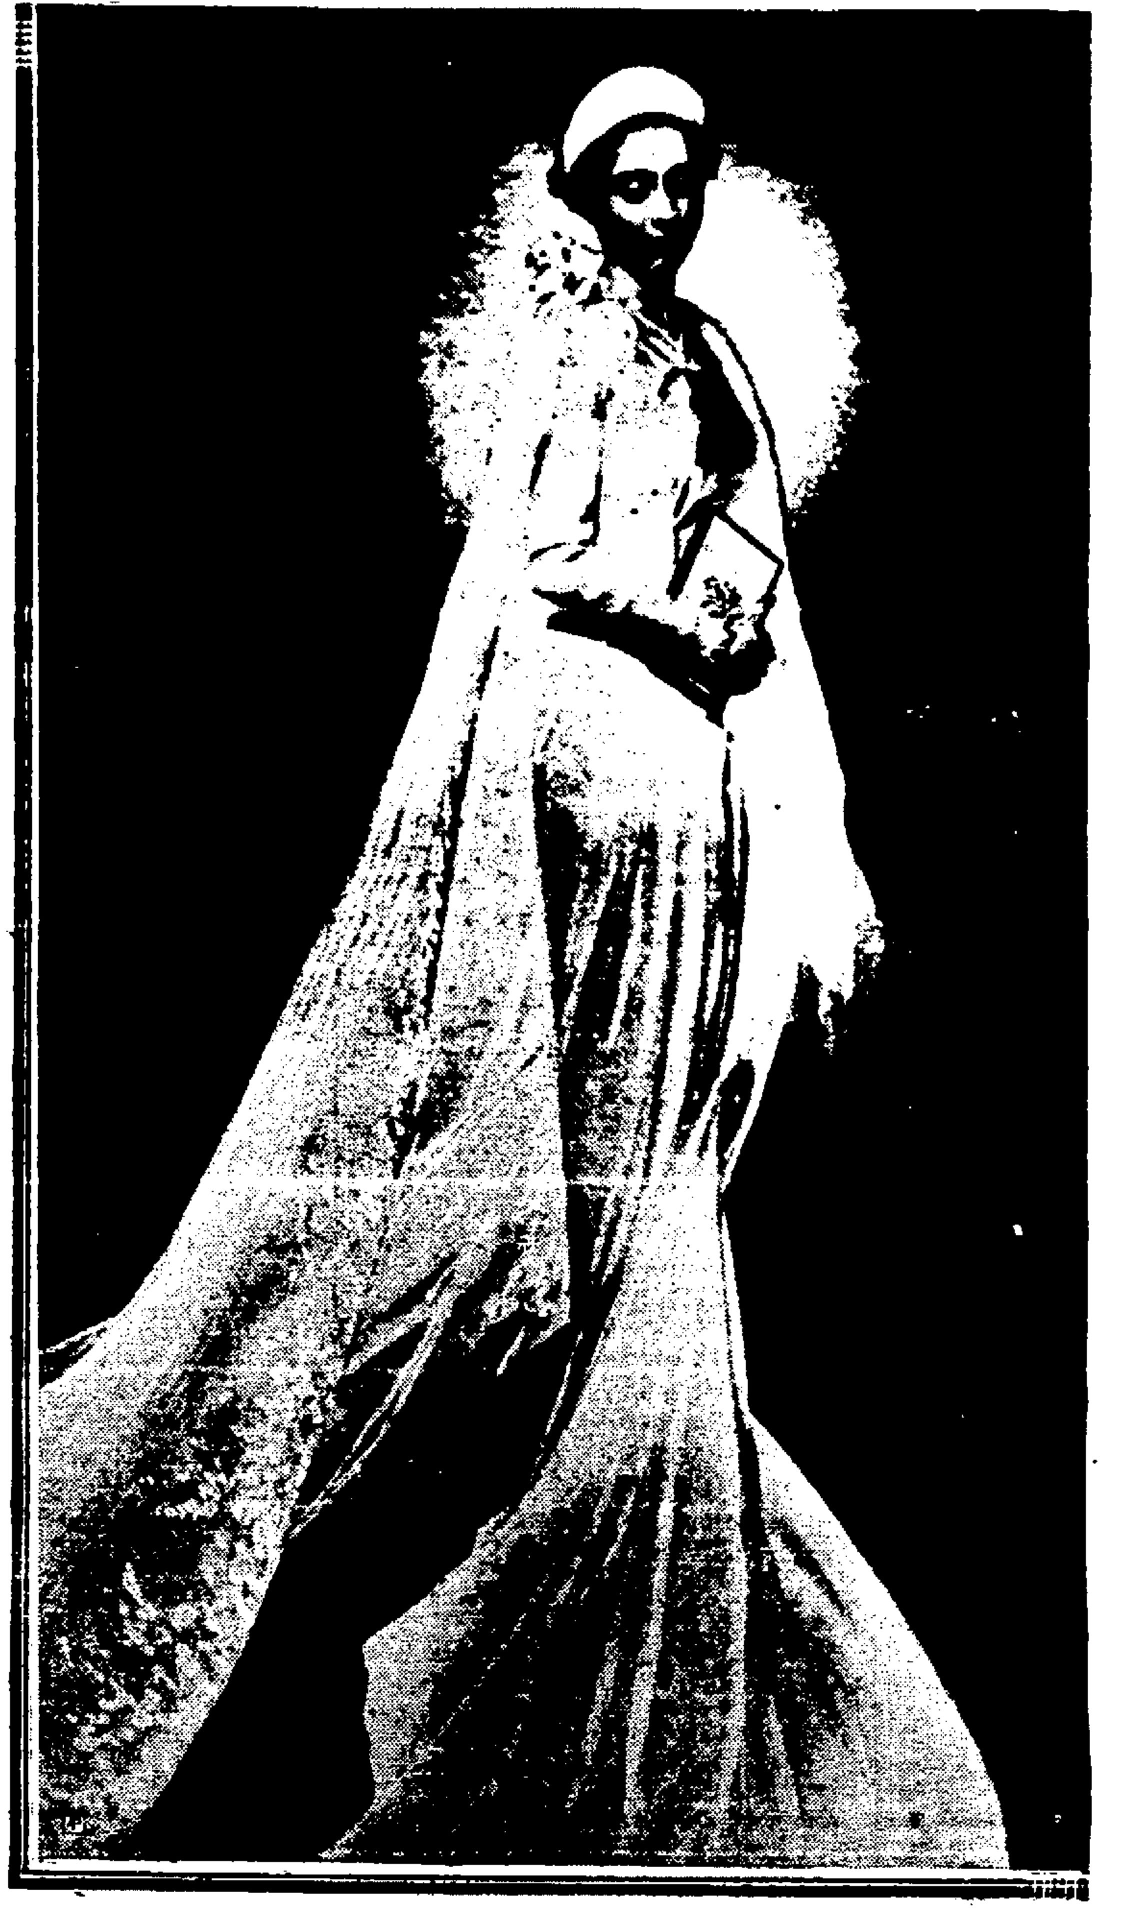
Old Lace Sweeps Down Aisles In This Spring's Bridal Pageant



Old Alencon family lace fashions the "court mantle" veil which gives a regal air to this bridal costume worn by the Princess Jeanne d'Arenberg and designed for her marriage to the Marquis Roland de Brissac. It is surpended from the shoulders of the white satin gown, designed by Worth with a three-yard train. The princess wore a crown-like headdress of tucked white satin and carried a prayerbook instead of flowers. (Model Copyright PAIS.)

Epworth League Union Meeting at New Paltz

New Paltz, May 11—The regular quarterly meeting of the Newburgh Local Union of Epworth League was held Tuesday evening, May 8, in the New Paltz Methodist Church. The program was as follows: Devotions were in charge of Homer A. Warren of Cornwall. Singing, prayer and scripture reading opened the service. Welcome was given by the second vice president, Miss Joyce Mauterstock, of New Paltz, who presided.

The Rev Robert L. Mauterstock introduced the speaker, the Rev. Alfred Coons, of Middle Hope, whose subject was "Companions." Miss Mauterstock gave the announcements and the offering was received, followed by the reports of the secretary and treasurer. Attendance was taken. Representatives were present from Trinity Church and St. John's Church of Newburgh, Walden, Cornwall, Clintondale, Highland, Modena and New Paltz. There was a total attendance of about 90.

The attendance banner was presented to Trinity Church Epworth League, Newburgh. The Rev. Robert L. Mauterstock, chairman of the Nominating Committee, gave the following report for office: President, Dorothy Wealch, Newburgh; first vice president, Homer Warren, Cornwall; second vice president, Joyce Mauterstock, New Paltz; third vice president, Albert Bowman, Maybrook; fourth vice president, George Wands, Cornwall; secretary, Ethel Vandervort, Highland; treasurer, Frank Miller, Modena; assistant editor of "District News," Blanche Gulnac, New Paltz The report was accepted and the officers duly elected. The new president appointed the following committee to have charge of winter institute: Elaine Kniffen, chairman, and the Rev. Robert L. Mauterstock, advisor, both of New Paltz; George Wands, Cornwall; Helen Dunworth, Walden; Evelyn Stewart, Maybrook; Ethel Swift, Highland, and Bradford Halstead, Cornwall.

The next meeting will be held on September 11 in the Walden Methodist Church. There was a social time following the meeting and a committee served refreshments of ice cream and cake.

Concerts for children will be part of the 1934-1935 season of the Kansas City Philharmonic orchestra.

Hopes Women Will Adopt This Habit As Well as Men

Glass of hot water each morning helps us look and feel clean, sweet, fresh.

Happy, bright, alert—vigorous and vivacious—a good clear skin; a natural, rosy complexion and freedom from illness are assured only by clean, healthy blood. If only every woman and likewise every man could realize the wonders of the morning inside bath, what a gratifying change would take place.

Instead of the thousands of sickly, anaemic-looking men, women and girls with pasty or muddy complexions; instead of the multitudes of "nerve wrecks," "rundowns," "brain fags" and pessimists we should see a virile, optimistic throng of rosy-cheeked people everywhere.

An inside bath is had by drinking, each morning before breakfast, a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and ten yards of bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour fermentations and poisons, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach.

Those subject to sick headache, biliousness, nasty breath, rheumatism, colds; and particularly those who have a pallid, sallow complexion and who are constipated very often, are urged to obtain a quarter pound of limestone phosphate at the drug store which will cost but a trifle but is sufficient to demonstrate the quick and remarkable change in both health and appearance awaiting those who practice internal sanitation. We must remember that inside cleanliness is more important than outside, because the skin does not absorb impurities to contaminate the blood, while the pores in the thirty feet of bowels do.—Adv.

New Twist To Film Marriage Risk Seen In Jean Harlow's Separation

Some Hollywood couples have drifted apart because husband and wife were separated by their work, but Jean Harlow (above) and her cameraman-husband have come to the parting of the ways even though both worked on the same movie lot.

BEGIN at breakfast with a bowl of toasted Kellogg's Corn Flakes. You get flavor and refreshing crispness that puts a real edge on your appetite.

But more than that. Kellogg's are rich in energy . . . easily, quickly digested. The kind of food that leaves you fit!

Enjoy Kellogg's for lunch, with milk or cream and add fruits or berries. Fine for a late bedtime snack.

And what could be better for the children's evening meal than these delicious easy-to-digest flakes? No trouble or cooking to serve.

Kellogg's are always oven-fresh, thanks to the heat-sealed WAXTITE bag—a patented Kellogg feature. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

Straus Reports On NRA Violations

Nathan Straus, Jr., state director of the National Emergency Council, made public today a report on complaints received in connection with industries under Code.

This report covers a period of four weeks, beginning April 2 and ending April 28. During this time the total number of cases handled amounted to 7,686 as compared with the previous four weeks which amounted to 5,921. Of this number 2,300 were new complaints. Seven thousand letters were received at this office and more than 15,000 letters were mailed out of this office.

In addition to the cases investigated, reviewed and disposed of, back wages amounting to $8,238, were returned to employes. In explaining the return of back wages, Mr. Straus points out that employers were underpaying their employes and in many cases were working more than the schedule number of hours. In determining the amount of money due an employe, it is necessary to audit the books. A special auditing department checks up every day on the books of many large industries in cases where complaints have been received that employes are being underpaid. It is interesting to note the subterfuges which many organizations employ in order to "snatch" a penny from employes or in trade practices—such means as hiring employes as masters and paying apprentice wages, deducting money from wages for dues in so-called "beneficial projects;" other means of "punching out" at 4:30 and immediately returning to work and working under cover. Another method pursued by many employers is to give outside work to contractors at Code prices and then force the contractors to take a much lower price.

In commenting on these "chiselling" practices, Mr. Straus said, "In my capacity as state director, I am going to severely punish any employer who fails to comply with the aims and purposes of the NRA. If any employer intends to be so un-American as to violate his agreement with the United States Government he does not deserve to remain in business.

"All persons against whom complaints have been lodged are given ample opportunity to demonstrate their desire to cooperate and to make restitution for any violations due to misunderstanding or ignorance. In all cases the names of complainants are kept secret as it may mean the loss of their jobs. Conversely, the mere revelation of the fact that a complaint has been filed against an employer may arouse adverse public opinion which might be disastrous to his business.

"The time of educating the employer is at an end. Now it is up to the employer to uphold the hands of the president in bringing about recovery through the rules laid down by the NRA. If ruthless under-cover practices are going to be employed to break down the NRA then, I as State Director will also use ruthless above-board tactics to see that the aims and purpose of the NRA are not destroyed."

Sardines for Supper.

For the quickly prepared supper when there is little in the house besides a few tins of sardines, some bread and coffee, and other small odds and ends, the sardines will be very useful and of more substance if you cook them in their own oil, turning them from one side to the other very frequently. Serve on toast with a dish of lemon for flavoring.

Approaching Fire Weather Is Seen

Albany, May 11—"We are headed for some very serious fire weather and we earnestly request all persons going into the Catskills, Adirondacks, on Long Island or other wooded areas in this state for the week-end to exercise unusual care," Lithgow Osborne, Conservation Commissioner said today. "Weather conditions such as are indicated for the next few days will greatly intensify the fire hazard throughout the state.

"Although showers may be in the offing, they will do little good. Unless we have heavy rains generally throughout the state the danger will remain with us. Increased temperatures with lowering humidities are to be expected. These, if accompanied by winds, will make any fire in the open a possible source of danger.

"The development of the normal spring fire season in this state has been retarded. However, reports received during the past few days indicate that a severe fire hazard is now in the making and serious forest, brush and grass fires may result unless the utmost care and precautions are exercised. Recent fires have been caused by fishermen, smokers and persons starting rubbish fires or grass fires and it is to these people we are making an appeal and requesting them to be extremely careful.

"Fires will not be permitted to lay waste forest land of our state. Unless the public can properly care for fires to prevent their getting out of control, or unless smokers or automobilists going into the wooded areas thoroughly extinguish burning matches and smoking material there can be no alternative but to close the woods. We sincerely hope that such action may be avoided through hearty cooperation on the part of those who use the wooded areas."

Picking Up Broken Glass.

If glass has been broken and you have swept up most of it but see small fragments which you do not want to handle, what will you do? Take some absorbent cotton, wet it and then pick up the shattered pieces. You may avoid nasty cuts that way.

A New "Super-Charged" Gasoline That Gives up to 6900 More Firing Charges Per Gallon

Shell Refineries Develop a Sensational New Way to "Re-Make" the Chemical Structure of Gasoline . . . Resulting in More Mileage, Added Power and Quicker Starting STOP measuring gasoline by the gallon. It's WHAT YOU GET in your gallon that really counts.

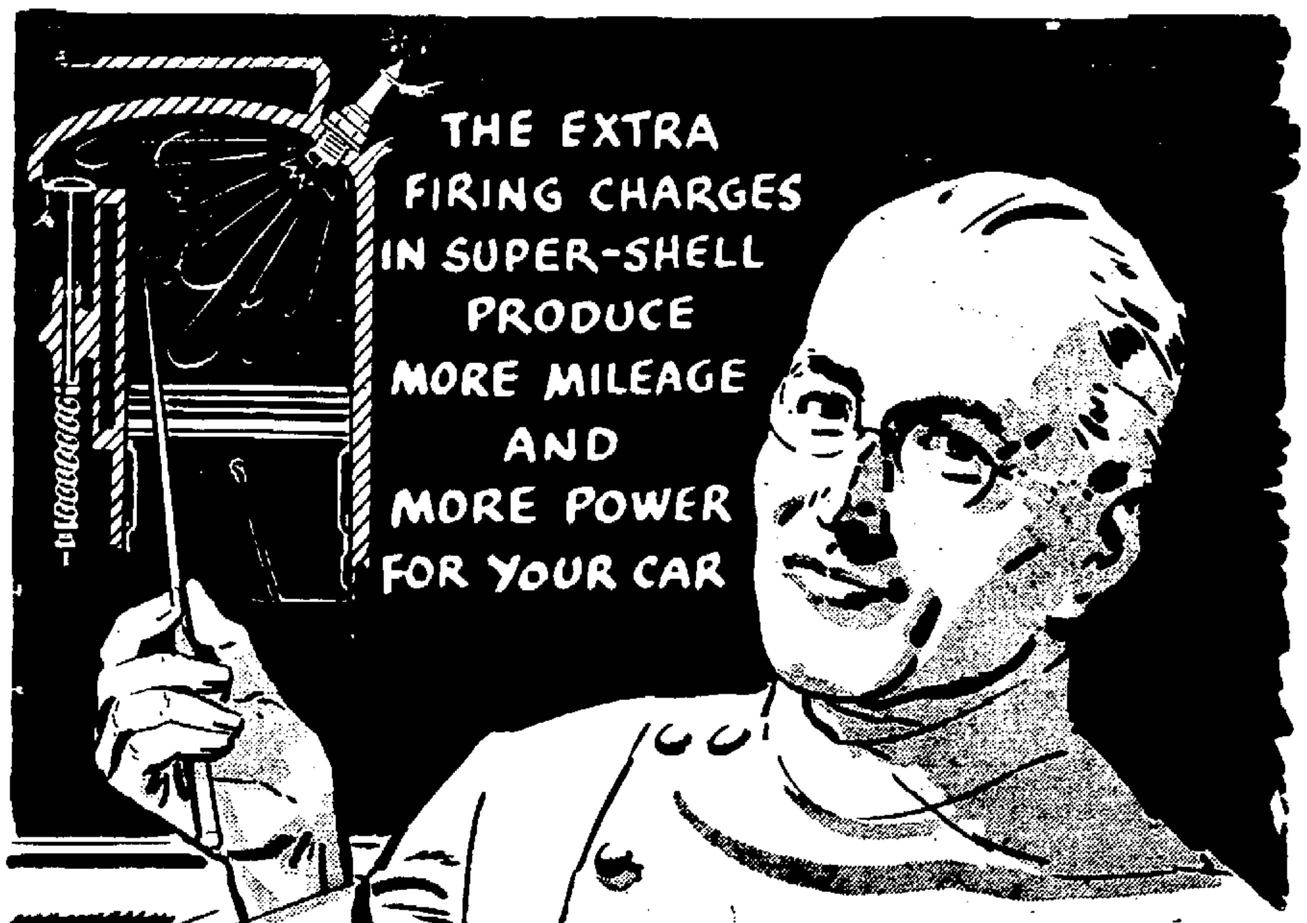
The new Super-Shell gives you up to 6900 extra firing charges. Every gallon of it is "super-charged" with this extra energy.

The secret of "super-charging" gasoline is the process by which Shell "re-makes" the entire chemical structure and packs it with additional energy units. There are actually thousands of additional power strokes in every gallon in traffic, on hills, wherever you drive this new-type motor fuel will win you. Acceleration is greatly increased. You can even feel Super-Shell's surge of extra power!

Try this first "super-charged" gasoline in your car. Do it today.

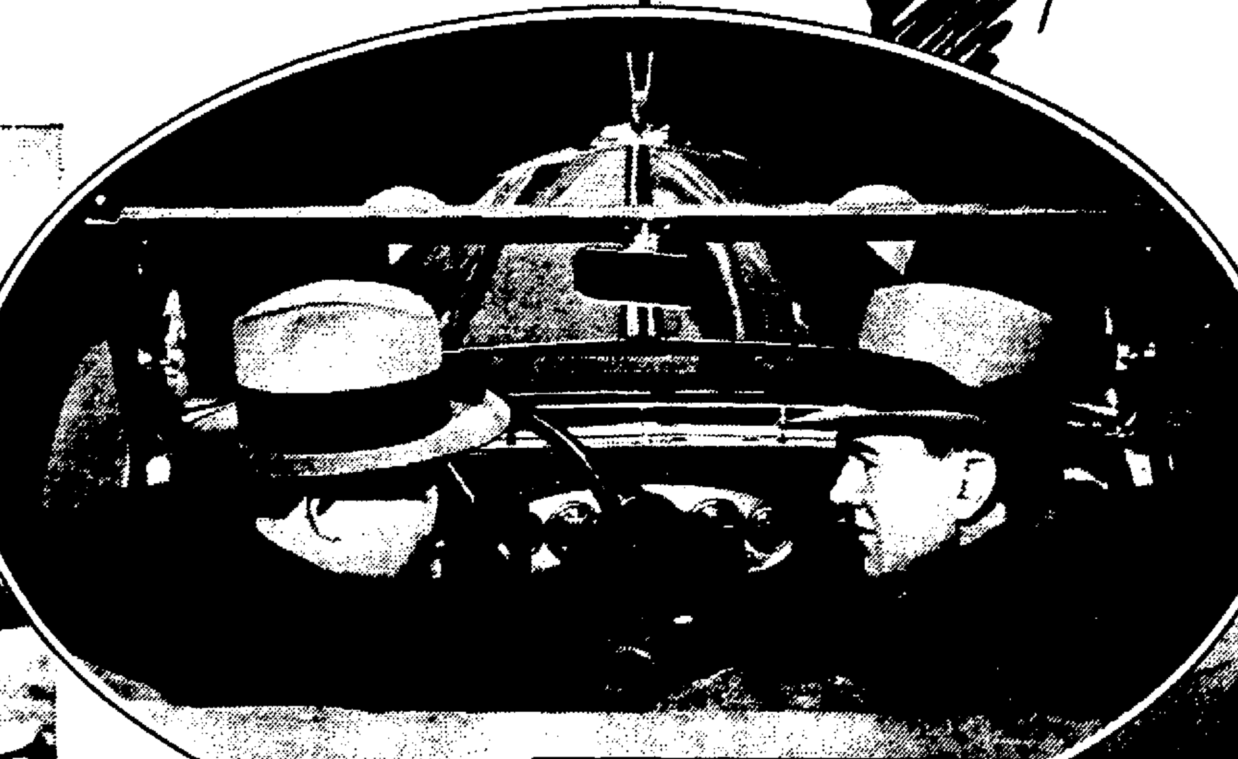
And remember, this new Super-Shell is good for your motor, too. It burns cleanly—with greatly reduced dilution of crankcase oil. It is knockless—a very top anti-knock rating.

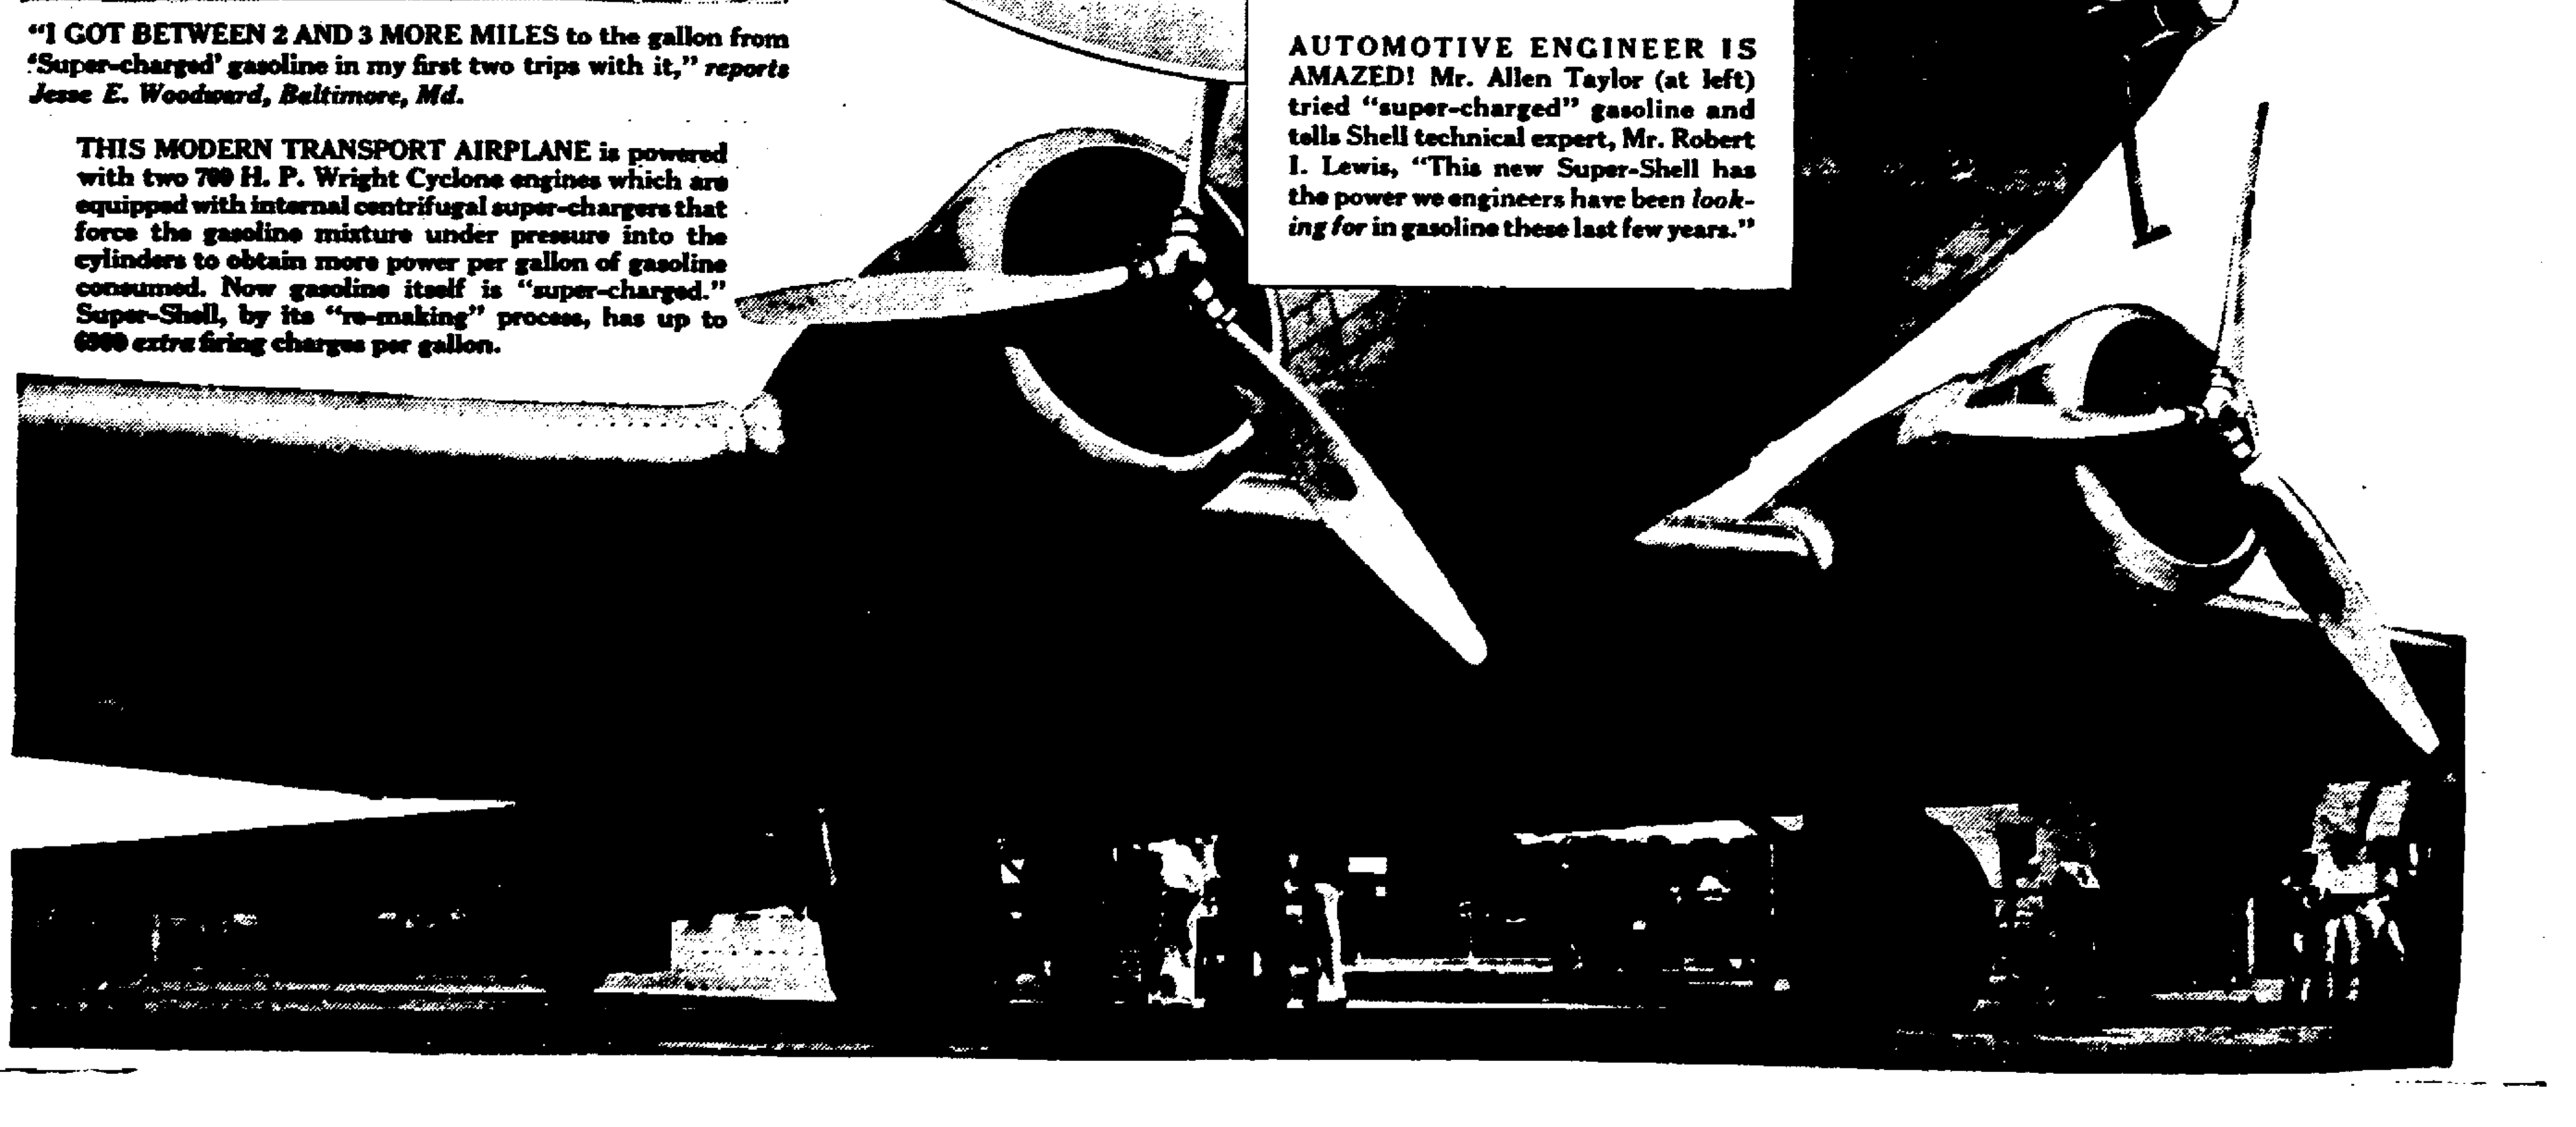
And the added mileage from its extra firing charges per gallon is good for your pocketbook! Super-Shell still sells at the price of regular gasoline.



THE EXTRA FIRING CHARGES IN SUPER-SHELL PRODUCE MORE MILEAGE AND MORE POWER FOR YOUR CAR

MORE ENERGY IS NOW CONCENTRATED in every gallon of the new Super-Shell. As many as 6900 extra firing charges have been packed into every gallon by Shell's "re-making" process which actually changes the chemical structure of gasoline. Think what these extra firing charges mean to you in greater power and mileage. You'll never use any other gasoline again once you've tried Super-Shell.





Copr., 1934, Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc.

"I GOT BETWEEN 2 AND 3 MORE MILES to the gallon from 'Super-charged' gasoline in my first two trips with it," reports Jesse E. Woodward, Baltimore, Md.

THIS MODERN TRANSPORT AIRPLANE is powered with two 700 H. P. Wright Cyclone engines which are equipped with internal centrifugal super-chargers that force the gasoline mixture under pressure into the cylinders to obtain more power per gallon of gasoline consumed. Now gasoline itself is "super-charged." Super-Shell, by its "re-making" process, has up to 6900 extra firing charges per gallon.

AUTOMOTIVE ENGINEER IS AMAZED! Mr. Allen Taylor (at left) tried "super-charged" gasoline and tells Shell technical expert, Mr. Robert I. Lewis, "This new Super-Shell has the power we engineers have been looking for in gasoline these last few years."

The Mayor's Suitcase

By R. C. CRAVEN

© by McClure Newspaper Syndicate. WNU Service.

THE train pulled into the Craryville station and pulled out again. In the brief moment that it paused, two suitcases were tossed off and two passengers descended.

The bags were very similar—of brown leather with corners reinforced in brass—but their owners were as unlike as a rose and an elm tree. One was Miss Margaret Hawthorne, bound for a dance at the Craryville Country club; the other, young Simon Baldwin, mayor of Mansfield, guest of honor at the chamber of commerce banquet at the Hotel Mohawk.

At the baggage-room counter they nearly bumped elbows yet neither was actually aware of the other. Margaret was intent on her imminent meeting with a recently acquired fiance, one Cyrus Underhill, while his honor was mulling over the climax of the speech he was scheduled to make.

Yet it was not very long afterward that each was reminded forcibly of the other.

Margaret, who had been asked to spend the week-end with Cyrus' Cousin Amelia, had gone up to her room and, kneeling on the floor, opened the suitcase and flung back the cover, only to utter a little shriek of consternation.

There lay within, carefully folded, a man's tuxedo; a pleated shirt; a collar; a black unmade bow tie; two spotless handkerchiefs.

Vaguely she recalled that there had been another passenger to alight from the train besides herself.

Well, there was a remote possibility that he might have discovered sooner than she the mistake and that, had he done so, he might have returned her bag at once to the station.

Margaret looked over the contents of the suitcase before her, but there was nothing to help her establish the identity of the man to whom they belonged.

Hastily, she put on her hat and coat again, went downstairs, and with a hurried word of explanation which Cousin Amelia only half understood flew out of the house and down the street to the corner where presently she caught a car.

Margaret had not yet seen Cyrus. But then she had not expected to. In the very letter which the postman had handed her that morning, as she was leaving the house, he had said that pressure of work at the office would probably detain him until seven or eight o'clock.

The baggage master proved a disappointment. No, no one had returned any suitcase. No, he could not possibly say who had hers. There had been several.

"Are you looking for somebody, miss?" the young bootblack who ran a stand on the platform had sauntered in and was trying to get the drift of the conversation.

"I am looking for the owner of this suitcase," said Margaret.

The youngster walked around the article in question, hands in his pockets. "I sure have seen that very grip before," he said earnestly. "It belongs to his honor, the mayor of Mansfield!"

"Mayor of Mansfield! But this is Craryville!"

"Well, he's a great traveler. Speeches and dinners all over the country. I used to be in the Mansfield station and every time he was going anywhere the mayor would get a shine from me."

"But how can I—why Cy!" If Margaret looked for Cyrus to take her in his arms, she was disappointed. Nor could her amazement at his unexpected appearance blind her to the fact that something was the matter. "Why, Cy, wherever did you spring from?"

"I called the house, Margaret, to see if you had arrived safely," said Cyrus stiffly. "Cousin Amelia said you had gone back to the station and that right after you left a man had telephoned from the Hotel Mohawk and said he must talk with you at once!"

Margaret clutched her fiance's arm. "Oh, he must be waiting there. Call a taxi, Cy. It's the mayor of Mansfield!"

But Cyrus did not budge. "Just why should the mayor of Mansfield, or, for that matter, the governor of the state, be waiting at the Hotel Mohawk for the girl I am supposed to be engaged to?"

"How masculinely stupid!" Margaret thought. But there was no time to waste. "Get a taxi at once, dear," she insisted. "And I'll explain all about it on the way."

Twenty minutes later Margaret was talking with the mayor himself. "I'm so sorry, Miss Hawthorne, that you should have gone to all this trouble. I wished to make sure you were really at that address before dispatching a boy with your suitcase."

"But how," inquired Margaret, "did you know about that address at all?"

"There was a letter on the very top," said his honor, with a smile, "from Cyrus. Believe me, however, I skipped everything but the address at the very end!"

"Wasn't he adorable!" sighed Margaret, some hours afterward, dancing dreamily in Cy's arms to the strains of a seductive waltz.

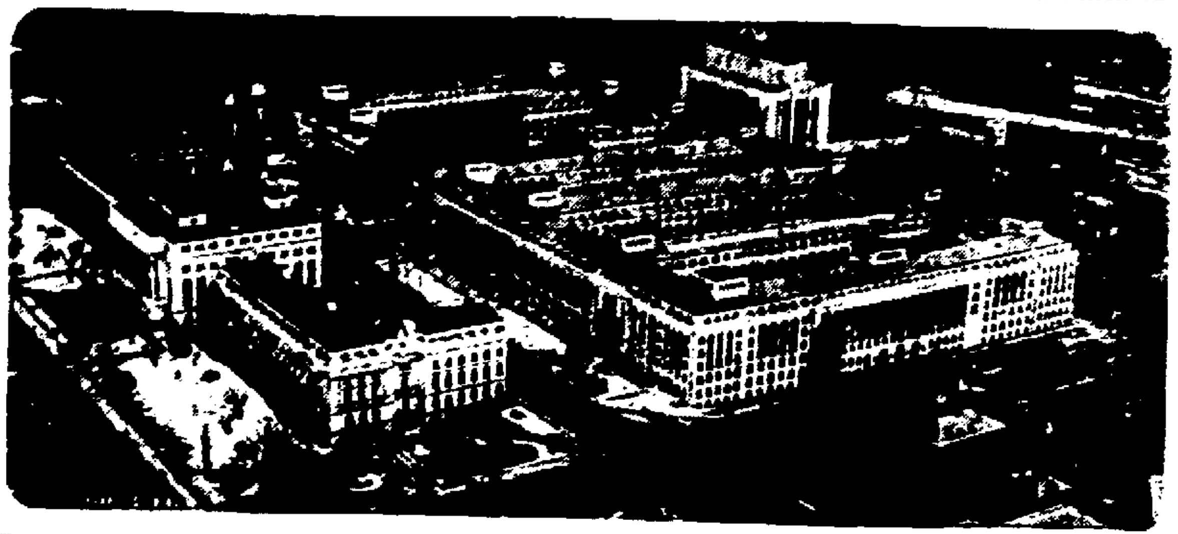
"Wasn't who—look here, Margaret, cut it out. I happen to know that fellow's married and got three kids!"

That he knew nothing of the kind, didn't, under the circumstances, worry Cyrus.

When English Ruler Dies

Upon the death of a ruler in England succession passes at once. The principle of immediate demise was laid down by William and Mary, in order to avoid the disturbances and inconveniences consequent to the death of a sovereign.

Agriculture Department Uses Lots of Space



COVERING nearly six city blocks, the United States Department of Agriculture buildings are the largest group of buildings to house government activities in Washington. This photograph, taken from the Washington monument, shows the administration building (left) where Secretary Wallace and his assistants have their offices, while on the right are the extensible buildings where the many agriculture laboratories are located. The activities of the Agricultural administration are also handled from this building.

Few Centuries May Show Food Supply Inadequate

Limitation of life, in other words death, has naturally been much debated by scientists and as a result there has been suggested the thesis—a perverse extension of the theory of natural selection and survival of the fittest—that death was an adaptation advantageous to the race.

Death, which has thus been evolved in the process of advance from a protozoan to the higher metazoan standard of existence, might be regarded as a provision against overpopulation and famine from insufficiency of the food supplies of the world, and so the natural counterpart to modern artificial birth control.

Miles Symer, professor of mathematics in Trinity college, Dublin, in the Seventeenth century, calculated that in the 1,400 years between the creation and the flood there would not have been standing room on the earth's surface if the patriarchs, with an average breeding period of 400 years, begat a son every three years.

With the rapid increase of the world's population, due to improved sanitation, there have not been wanting estimations that, should no change occur, a few centuries will show the food supply of the world inadequate for its inhabitants.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

The average height of full-grown elm trees is 60 to 70 feet but some have been known to reach 120 feet.

Program Enjoyed by Musical Society

The Musical Society of Kingston celebrated National Music Week by holding its last open meeting of the season on Thursday evening. The society meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William D. Brinnier, Jr., and a fine program was given by the members of the society. The numbers were chosen as being outstanding in their excellence during the year's meetings by the society. Harry P. Dodge was the guest accompanist of the evening, making possible some of the more exacting numbers of the evening.

The full program as given was as follows:

"Romanze in F Sharp" .. Schumann
Gladys Ratchie Millonig.
"Russian Folk Tunes"
"Hungarian Folk Tunes"
Gladys Craw Muller.
(a) "Sapphic Ode" .... Brahms
(b) "To Music" .... Schubert
Gladys Hopper Tinnie.
"That's the World in June" ......
Charles Gilbert Spross
Gabrielle Forst.
(a) "You in a Gondola" .... Clarke
(b) "I Love Life" ...... Mana-Zucca
Allie Trowbridge.
"Meditation" from "Thais" ....
—Massenet
Eva Clinton.
(a) "The Wonderful Month of May"
—Schumann
(b) "Dedication"
Ilse Knauth Dunbar.
Trio, "How Merrily We Live" .. Este
Gabrielle Forst, Gladys Tinnie,
Florence Coombs.
Arias from "Il Trovatore"
"Tace Da Notte Placida" ... Verdi
"Di Tale Amor" .... Verdi
Jessie Cowley Wolfersteig.
"Rhapsody" .... Dohnanyi
Phyllis Brodhead.
Old English Round of the 13th century—"Sumer is i-cumen in."

Accompanists: Ethel Mauterstock, Lelia Decker, Eva Clinton, Jean R. Mills.

Guest accompanist: Harry P. Dodge.

The society members especially enjoyed singing the Old English Round, which, discovered in 1226 A. D., is said to be the oldest piece of written music, the works of Monks. Mr. Dodge led the society in singing this Round.

After the greatly enjoyed musical program, refreshments were served and a social hour greatly enjoyed, the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Brinnier being deeply appreciated.

Factory Employment Shows 50 Per Cent Gain

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP).—Factory employment was a third greater and payrolls almost 50 per cent greater in the middle of April than a year ago, records of the State Labor Department showed today.

The upward climb began in March, 1933, dropped again between August and January, and has continued upward since the latter date, the department reported. Normally, the department said, employment and payrolls drop during April.

"Increases in both employment and payrolls were noted in all upstate industrial centers except Binghamton and Rochester," the report stated. "In Rochester, the number of persons employed showed a small net gain, but wage payments were below the March total.

"The Binghamton district reported a net gain in employment, due principally to enlarged forces in shoe and metal products factories, but payrolls showed a slight net drop."

Seasonal curtailment in clothing, millinery, food and tobacco employment caused a slight loss in New York city. Most of the upstate gains were in the metal and machinery groups and in knit goods.

NOTICE OF COMPLETION OF SCHOOL ASSESSMENT

Notice is hereby given that the assessor of the city of Kingston has completed his school assessment roll for the school fiscal year 1934-1935. That a copy thereof has been left at his office in the city hall, where it may be seen and examined by any person until the third Tuesday of May next, and that on such day at 9 o'clock in the forenoon, said assessor will attend at the city hall, in the said city, to hear and examine all complaints in relation to such assessments as provided by section 32-A of the city charter as amended.

GEORGE W. MOORE,
Assessor.

Dated May 1, 1934.

Society To Bow At British Courts

Glittering Pageantry Marks Buckingham Palace Functions

By OSCAR LEIDING

London (AP)—Twenty-eight hundred debutantes and young matrons—with scarcely three dozen Americans among them—will curtsy before King George and Queen Mary in the 1934 royal courts.

The functions, to be held May 15 and 16 and June 12 and 13, represent in splendor and ceremony occasions without peer in the social calendar.

Ambassador's Big Trial

For Robert W. Bingham, American ambassador to the Court of St. James, the approach of the courts has spelled one of the most delicate tasks of the office he has held for nearly a year.

It is his personal prerogative to frown upon or to approve the applications of several hundred Americans who seek to be commanded to appear before British royalty.

And out of the several hundred he can pick only eight for each court, plus the few diplomatic presentees who will make up the sum total of America's participation in the glittering pageantry.

Glittering it will be, too, this year for fashion has decreed that brilliant materials and metal or bead embroideries are to feature the season's gowns. Gloves will be required—and no restriction has been placed on colors.

Luxury Trades Profit

Sewing machines are whirring and luxury trades are booming for it is estimated that the courts will mean a turnover of $5,000,000 scattered among manufacturers, designers, shops, shoemakers, photographers, florists, caterers, places of entertainment and countless others.

For the favored few, for the 2,800 commanded to appear before the king and queen represent but a fraction of the number who seek the honor, the one grand moment in the full blaze of the social sun ends months of preparation.

At the rate of 10 to 12 a minute, they will march in stately procession into the great white and gold ballroom of Buckingham Palace where, seated on gold and crimson thrones and flanked by beautifully gowned women and resplendently uniformed men, the king and queen hold court.

Each debutante in turn sinks in schooled curtsy and graceful obeisance to the king, rises and repeats the ceremony before the queen, and moves on. The king and queen have heard her name and bowed when she curtsied—that, with the knowledge that social life holds no greater honor, is her reward.

King George and Queen Mary, shown framed in the gates of Buckingham Palace, are to hold four royal courts this year at which the pick of society's debutantes and young matrons, including 32 Americans, are to reach the social pinnacle of curtsying before the throne. Glittering gowns and bright colors are to be the rule this season.

SPRING OPENING OF ARK OF SALVATION

Complete preparations have been made for the spring opening of The Ark of Salvation, near Hurley, on Sunday. T. LeRoy Muir, noted pulpiteer and revivalist of Roxbury, will arrive today and take charge of the two weeks of services. Evangelist Muir, who has been resting at Muir Lodge in the Catskills after meetings in Akron and Massillon, Ohio, will speak Sunday afternoon at 2:30 on "Power, Why The Church has lost it." Augusta Susdorff of New York city will speak on "The Jew in Modern Missions." There will be a program of music fitting to Mother's Day. In the evening at 8 o'clock the Rev. Mr. Muir will begin a series of prophetic subjects which will continue through the week. The Sunday night subject is "The Devil's Doom. When does the Sea give up its Dead?" Will Christians finally become dictators? Will the American Government go Fascist?" Miss Ruth Hasbrouck, director of the Ark, announces that the roads are in splendid condition and that special parking facilities are being arranged. The public is cordially invited.

P.-T. A. Broadcast.

On Monday, May 14, over Red Network from 2:15 to 2:45 p. m., will be broadcast (D. S. T.) the session of National Congress of Parents and Teachers in convention at Des Moines, Iowa. Speakers will be Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, wife of Secretary of Interior, and J. W. Studebacker, superintendent of schools of Des Moines, Ia.

Christian Science Radio Programs.

Through the courtesy of Station WMCA, New York city, a series of Christian Science special programs will be radiocast each Tuesday and Thursday morning from 9:15 to 9:30 o'clock. The first program of this series will be radiocast on Tuesday morning, May 15, from 9:15 to 9:30 o'clock.

Heroic Monument Honors Turkey's Unsung Policemen

Ankara, (AP)—The Turkey that used to cast Moslem frowns upon all statues is now the outstanding occident.

Ankara is erecting something unusual in sculpture, a monument to "the unknown policeman." It will be a giant affair of marble and bronze reliefs, honoring the gendarmes of the new Turkey who died in the line of duty.

Two figures, each 19 feet high, will flank the monument. One will represent the Turk of the passed, dressed in fez and voluminous pantaloons. The other will show the Turk of the Kemalist present in derby, oxfords, and business suit.

The monument itself will bear two bas-reliefs depicting Turkish policemen on the job. One will show officers rescuing a family from a burning home. In the other, the strong arm of the law will clutch the necks of murderers who are clutching the throats of a mother, a father and a child asleep in a home.

Emergency Laundering.

If you are stopping in a hotel and find your supply of hosiery is running low, wash the stockings, wrap them in a towel and place on a radiator to dry.

Annual Meeting Held At Baptist Church

The annual church and congregational meeting of the Wurts Street Baptist Church was held at the church Thursday evening. In spite of the storm there was a large attendance present and a fine spirit of loyalty and cooperation. After the roll call the reports were read from the various officers and agencies of the church which showed that the church was in a fine condition. These reports were very encouraging to both pastor and people. The following officers were elected: Deacons, James Tongue, W. W. Schultz, sr., Nicholas Bode; deaconess emeritus, Mrs. Charles Deyo; deaconesses, Mrs. Mary Hiller, Mrs. Katherine [illegible], Mrs. William B. Hutton; church clerk, Mrs. Elizabeth Spielman; trustees, Dayton Murray, Charles Neebe; chief usher, Albert B. May. The Rev. Clarence F. Brown, the pastor, was elected a delegate to the Northern Baptist convention to be held in Rochester May 21-25.

After the business session there was an enjoyable musical program given by the [illegible] of the [illegible] Avenue Baptist Church under the direction of John Warner. [illegible] Frank, tenor soloist of St. John's Episcopal Church of Kingston, rendered a group of numbers which was enthusiastically received. The address of the evening was given by Dr. Samuel J. Skevington, minister of Temple Baptist Church of Albany, who spoke on the theme, "The Efficient Church." With his fine eloquence he challenged the church to build its work along three lines: to be a Church of Worship in the Kingdom, to be a Church of Service in the World and to be a Church of Evangelism to Humanity. It was an inspiring message to the people of the church. All present agreed that it was one of the best annual meetings held by the church and the outlook for the future was very promising.

Cuba's New Divorce Law.

Havana, May 11 (AP)—Cuba's new divorce law went into effect today. Under it, foreigners may obtain divorces after only 30 days legal residence. In cases of "mutual petition," 40 days will be required for a divorce. Where only one party sues, it will take about four months, in the opinion of Secretary of the Presidency Santovenia.

Financial and Commercial

New York, May 11 (AP)—Signs of internal strength appeared in the stock market today. The selling waves of yesterday seemed to have subsided to occasional ripples and sentiment, as a whole, was a bit more cheerful.

There was little news of outstanding importance to shares, but observers spoke of an "over-sold" condition and the hesitancy of the bears to expand short commitments. There was no rush on the buying side, however, and, during the greater part of the session, the trading pace was the slowest of the week.

Grains were nervous under profit taking based on forecasts of rain in the drouth stricken districts. Cotton was fairly steady, but silver futures were in supply at sizeable declines as Secretary Morgenthau went into another conference with the Senate silver bloc at Washington. Rubber improved moderately. Bonds were somewhat nervous, although Federal issues again edged upward. Dollar rates were narrow.

Preferred shares of Radio got up a point or more and similar advances were recorded by Schenley, American Machine, U. S. Rubber preferred and American Can. A steady to firm tone was displayed by Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, Goodyear, Bethlehem Steel, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, DuPont, Johns-Manville, Standard Brands, New York Central and National Distillers. U. S. Smelting dropped more than 2 at one time, but recovered most of the loss. The other metals were easy. Many of the oils, rails and utilities did virtually nothing.

Statistical services reported a more than seasonal rise of 14.7 per cent in building permit values in April over March. Comparison with the same period a year ago showed a gain of 32.5 per cent. Permits in 215 cities in the United States during April totaled more than $29,000,000 as against some $25,500,000 in the preceding month.

Woodstock Artists Announce 1934 Shows

Woodstock, May 11—Today the Woodstock Artists Association announced the schedule of exhibitions at the Art Gallery for its 15th season. Also announced is the fact that Mrs. Emil Holzhauer will replace Miss Mary Mountrie Wilson as directress of the gallery.

The first show of the summer will be a jury show and will be know as the Woodstock Art Gallery show of paintings and sculptures and will be open to the public from June 16 to June 27.

The Woodstock Art Gallery show of small paintings, water-colors, pastels, drawings and graphic arts, a jury exhibition, will take place from June 30 to July 18.

No retrospective show has been planned for this year but the second annual exhibition of Woodstock Artists Association will be held from July 21 to August 8 and will be selected by the directors. It is expected that the exhibition this year will be marked by another public dinner in the gallery.

The remaining exhibitions are: Woodstock Art Gallery No Jury show, August 11 to 29; Summer Review, work done during the summer to include painting, sculpture and graphic arts, from September 1 to 15.

General rules for 1934 exhibitors are: Exhibits must be delivered to the gallery on the following days: June 14, June 28, July 19, August 9, August 30. For each Woodstock Art Gallery exhibit a nominal fee will be charged. All exhibitors pay wall space fees to the manager, Mrs. Holzhauer; such fees must be paid before the removal of any exhibit. The decision of the exhibition committee is final. A commission will be charged on all sales. The gallery or the association is not responsible in any way for damage to exhibits.

The annual award, a memorial prize of $50 will be given to the artist under 35 years of age who shows the most promising work during the season. Gallery hours will be from 1:30 to 6 p. m.; Saturdays and holidays, 10 a. m. to 6 p. m.

Officers and directors of the Woodstock Artists Association are: Carl Eric Lindin, honorable president; Miss Alice Wardwell, honorable vice president; Henry Billings, Arnold Blanch, Konrad Cramer, Alfeo Faggi, Harry Gottlieb, Neil McD. Ives, Georgiana Klitgaard, Yasuo Kuniyoshi, Henry Mattson, Henry Lee McFee, Hermon More, Joseph Pollet, Paul Rohland, Charles Rosen, Judson Smith, Eugene Speicher, Dorothy Varian, Carl Walters, Arnold Wiltz.

Johnston-DuBois

Miss Myrtle DuBois of Port Ewen and Archie Gustavis Johnston of 61 Wall street, formerly of West Virginia, were married on Tuesday evening, May 8, at the parsonage of the Church of the Comforter, by the Rev. Wilbur F. Stowe. Miss DuBois looked very attractive in her wedding gown of a beautiful grey and with hat to match. The bridesmaid, Miss Pearl Markle, wore a pretty gown of blue with hat to match. Lewis DuBois, brother of the bride, acted as best man. Miss DuBois is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson DuBois of Port Ewen. The newly wedded couple have a host of friends who wish them many years of happy wedded life. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston expect to reside in Kingston.

About the Folks

Marion Cole was removed from 211 Foxhall avenue to the Kingston Hospital in the ambulance on Thursday.

James Denton, seven-year-old son of Mrs. Kate Denton of Linderman avenue, this city, has recovered from two operations, performed recently by Dr. Myers at the Kingston Hospital.

Mrs. C. A. Van Demark of 91 First avenue is a patient at the Kingston Hospital where she underwent a serious operation Wednesday. She is convalescing under the care of Dr. Frank Johnston. Mrs. Van Demark's many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Rochester, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—Walter E. ("Rabbit") Maranville, second baseman of the Boston Braves, recuperating at his home here fro ma broken leg sustained during the training early last month, today said he doubted he would ever be able to play big league baseball again.

Young Athenian's Oath

The oath of the young Athenian is: "We will never bring disgrace on this, our city, by an act of dishonesty or cowardice. We will fight for the ideals and sacred things of the city, both alone and with many. We will revere and obey the city's laws and will do our best to incite a like reverence and respect in those above us who are known to annul them or set them at naught. We will strive increasingly to quicken the public's sense of civic duty. Thus in all these ways we will transmit this city, not only not less, but greater, better and more beautiful than it was transmitted to us."

U.S. Foursomes Take Three Matches, Lose 1

By Gayle Talbot,
Associated Press Sports Writer.

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 11 (AP)—American golfers' first venture of the 1934 campaign in international competition was crowned with success today as the United States Walker cup foursomes won three out of four matches from their British rivals on the opening day of two days of play. Eight singles matches will be played tomorrow.

Johnny Goodman, bold, young U. S. open champion, and his stocky square shouldered partner, W. Lawson Little, made a runaway of their match with the crack British team, Roger Wethered and Cyril Tolley, winning, 8 and 6.

The other American victories were scored by 50-year-old H. Chandler Egan and Max Marston, who defeated the Hon. Michael Scott, British Captain, and Sam McKinlay, 3 and 2, and Gus Moreland and Jack Westland, who conquered Harry Beatley and Eric Fiddian, 6 and 5.

Francis Ouimet, bespectacled captain of the American side, and George T. Dunlap, Jr., American amateur titleholder, were the lone Americans to dip their colors. Waging a losing battle all the way, Ouimet and Dunlap fought gamely and doggedly but were vanquished by Eric McCruvie and Jack McLean, 4 and 2.

Mastiff Is Among Oldest on Britain's Canine List

From a niche among the greatest of all hunting dogs, the Mastiff has been relegated to the level of our neglected canine breeds. It is deserving of better treatment than this, declares a writer in the Detroit News, for it is the embodiment of all that is good and desirable in companionable pets.

It would not be far-fetched to say that the Mastiff has become a rare breed, for it is only on occasions that one is seen. And yet the owners of what few Mastiffs remain cannot understand why the popularity of the animal should be less than the St. Bernard, Newfoundland or any other of the large dogs and there appears to be no reasonable answer to their query.

The Mastiff is generally conceded as being among the oldest of British bred dogs and can trace its ancestry back to the Assyrian hunting moors. It was brought to England by the adventurous Phoenician traders about the Sixth century B. C. For years it was bred primarily for big game hunting purposes, but was gradually replaced by the smaller terrier and hound breeds.

The standard weight of the Mastiff is around 170 pounds, and it stands about 28 inches high at the fore shoulders. The body is strong, muscular, straight and heavy with a deep chest. The head is massive with square muzzle. The color should be fawn with darker ears, face and muzzle or it may be brindle.

Laying aside the splendid hunting instincts found in the well-trained Mastiff, its disposition and faithfulness recommend it as an exceptional companion. In this respect it is the equal of the St. Bernard or Newfoundland.

The Island of Rhodes in Limelight With Castles

Ten miles south of Cape Alypo, in Asia Minor, lies the island of Rhodes, which is perhaps first noticed in connection with the statue constructed there by Charles of Lindus.

In the Alexandrian period, notes a writer in the Chicago Tribune, when only seven structures were considered worthy of the name "wonders of the world," the Colossus at Rhodes ranked sixth in the list. This 105-foot statue of the sun god was razed by an earthquake in 224 B. C., and its fragments lay undisturbed for 882 years. Shortly after 656 A. D. the Saracens, having conquered Rhodes, sold the debris to a scrap metal dealer, who used 900 camels in carrying it away. About 1309, at the instigation of the pope, Rhodes was besieged and captured by the Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem and strongly fortified.

The knights left few relics of the classical period, but they builded so well that their walls and towers and moated castles constitute the major part of the modern city. The city was evacuated by the knights in 1522 after they had honorably capitulated to Sultan Suleiman I, who had sacrificed 90,000 men in a vain attempt to take it by siege.

When Things Petrify

When wood or the carcass of an animal apparently turns into stone it is said that it petrifies, observes R. G. Turner in the Kansas City Times. But in reality there is no conversion of organic matter into stone. What happens is this: Water containing dissolved minerals infiltrates through the cells of the dead plant or animal and particle by particle takes the place of the organic fiber or flesh therein. The original form of the petrifying mass serves merely as the mold in which the stone is deposited by the infiltrating water.

Adobe Hut, Oldest House

An adobe hut in Santa Fe, N. M., is said to be the oldest house in the United States. Santa Fe itself is the second oldest community in the country, having been founded in 1604. The oldest town within the borders of the United States is St. Augustine, Fla. The site of Santa Fe originally was an Indian pueblo. The Spaniards settled there first, and later the town was a Mexican settlement. During the Spanish regime the name of the town was Villa Real de Santa Fe de San Francisco.

Interment was in Modena Rural cemetery, with the Rev. Robert Ritchie of Gardiner officiating. Mr. Elmendorf died at the Ulster County Home in New Paltz after an illness of several months, at the age of 86 years. Besides his wife he is survived by one brother, Noah Elmendorf of Des Moines, Ia., and his sister, Miss Elmendorf of Clintondale.

Ellenville, May 11.—Mrs. Grace Miller, 54, widow of Vern G. Decker of 22 Danforth avenue, Jersey City, N. J., died on Friday night, May 4, of complications from which she had been suffering for some time. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Frank Crawford, four grandchildren, four sisters, Mrs. Seymour J. Smith of Poughkeepsie, Mrs. S. H. Merritt of Kingston, Mrs. Norman B. Young of Bridgeport, Conn., and Mrs. E. B. Ter Bush of Ellenville; one brother, Fred Miller, of Poughkeepsie, six nieces and 10 nephews. Funeral services were held on Tuesday, May 7, at 2 o'clock with burial in Jersey City, N. J., where Mrs. Decker's husband was buried about two years ago.

Ellenville, May 11. — Gilbert Francis died Thursday May 3, at the home of his sister, Miss Dora Francis of Elting court. He was born at Stittsville, Oneida county, April 21, 1859, the son of John Francis of Wales and Katherine Campbell of Massachusetts. He married Jessie Westcott of Ellenville, who died in November, 1910. After the death of his wife he went to Warwick to live with his daughter, returning to Ellenville three years ago to make his home with his sister. Surviving him besides his sister, is one daughter, Mrs. Clifford Benedict of Warwick. Funeral services were held on Sunday at 3 p. m. at the Ostrander Mortuary Chapel, conducted by the Rev. Perry Van Dyke. Interment was in Fantinekill cemetery.

Ellenville, May 11.—James D. Wright died on Friday, May 4, at the new Dutchess Health Center Hospital at Rhinebeck, following a stroke. He was born January 2, 1858, at Grahamsville, the son of Daniel and Lydia Wright. Surviving him are four sisters, Mrs. Jerusha Sheeley of Philadelphia, Pa., Mrs. Lydia Hornbeck of Los Angeles, Calif., and the Misses Grace and Carrie Wright of New York city and one brother, Edward Wright, of Vineland, N. J. Funeral services were held at the Ostrander Mortuary Chapel on Monday, May 7, at 2 p. m., the Rev. A. M. Wilkins officiating. A delegation from the Lake Katrine Grange, of which Mr. Wright was a charter member, officiated at the services held at the grave. Interment was in the Fantinekill Cemetery.

The funeral of John J. Holohean was held from his late home, 123 Foxhall avenue, this morning at 9 o'clock and at 9:30 at St. Mary's Church, where a high Mass was offered by the Rev. William H. Kennedy. There were many relatives and friends in attendance. Floral pieces and spiritual bouquets in the form of Mass cards were numerous. Responses to the Mass were sung by the children's choir. At the offertory Francis X. Fitzgerald sang "Ave Maria" and at the conclusion, "Pie Jesu." Mr. Holohean was a member of the Holy Name and Thursday evening that society called at his late home to recite the Rosary under the direction of the Rev. B. C. Roth. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery, where final absolution was pronounced by the Very Rev. John J. Stanley. Bearers were William O'Reilly, Matthew Bence, Patrick Gallagher, Bernard Murray, Patrick Gilday and Louis Bowers.

The funeral of Mrs. Margaret Dermody, who died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. John Burke, in New York city, on Monday, was held from the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas McGann, 37 Derrenbacher street, this morning at 10 o'clock, thence to St. Mary's Church where at 10:30 o'clock a solemn Mass of requiem was offered for the repose of her soul by the Rev. James P. Moore as celebrant, assisted by the Rev. William H. Kennedy as deacon and the Rev. B. Conrad Roth, as sub-deacon. There were a number of beautiful floral tributes from a host of sorrowing relatives and friends together with spiritual bouquets in the form of Mass cards which were placed near the casket. The children's choir sang the responses during the Mass and at the conclusion as the body was borne from the church rendered "Nearer My God to Thee". The casket bearers were Edward Dermody, Joseph Schatzel, Jacob Schatzel, John Rice, Joseph Halliman and Thomas McGann. The Rev. William H. Kennedy accompanied the cortege to St. Mary's cemetery and pronounced the final absolution at the grave as the body was laid to rest in the family plot.

Found Adventure in South Pacific

CAPT. ERNEST GILLING and his wife and first mate, Dorothy, limped into Honolulu harbor aboard their 54-foot schooner yacht, Valkyrie, after an adventurous 126-day voyage from Papeete, Tahiti, during which their main topmast was lost in a squall, food and water ran low, and Harry Anderson, war vet member of the crew, suffered from an infection in an old war wound in his leg and which required amputation upon his arrival in Honolulu. The ship was built in 1930 at Auckland, N. Z., and has been used since then for extensive cruising in south seas by Captain Gilling and his wife. Captain Gilling is a master mariner, having received his early training in sailing ships, and during the war he was in command of an Australian troop transport.

New York Motorists Must Pay Three Cent Tax on Gallon of Gas

Governor Approves Bill Extending for Another Year the Emergency One Cent Levy—Fifteen New Laws Added to the Statute Books.

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—Motorists of New York state must pay a three cent state tax on each gallon of gasoline for another year under terms of a bill enacted into law today by Governor Lehman's signature.

This was assured when the executive approved the Buckley bill extending for another year the emergency one cent levy, estimated to bring in $15,000,000. It is one of the major budget balancing measures.

The governor added 15 more laws to the statute books, increasing to 440 the number thus far enacted this year. At the same time he vetoed three proposals.

One of the new acts permits sale of alcohol without tax to persons using it for non-beverage purposes, while another tax law amendment strikes out the one per cent deduction for expenses now allowed distribution of beverages in their tax payments.

Another measure approved by the governor provides that distributors must pay a tax on all beverages used as well as sold by them.

The motorist who desires to take a short vacation over the Fourth of July when it occurs on a week-end is given recognition in the Palmer act.

This provides that when the first day of July falls on Saturday, Sunday or Monday, the motor vehicle department may issue one-half year registrations starting on the preceding Friday. Heretofore these could not be issued until July 1.

The bills vetoed were intended to:

Confer on motor vehicle examiners authority to make arrests for violations of the vehicle and traffic law.

Permit dissolution of business corporations which have not filed an annual tax return during the period of three consecutive years.

Permitting a change in the size of nets and mesh used in taking pike, pike perch and herring.

Political Practice To Advise Corporations, States Senator Thayer

Declaration of Practice Came During an Explanation of a Passage in a Letter to S. J. McGee—Hearing Adjourned Until Monday.

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—Defending himself against charges of official misconduct, State Senator Warren T. Thayer today told a committee of colleagues investigating his utility relationship that it was his political practice to advise corporations, organizations and individuals that he had been instrumental in defeating legislation detrimental to them.

The declaration of practice came during an explanation of a passage in a letter to S. J. McGee, vice president of the Associated Gas and Electric Company, which reads:

"I hope my work during the past session was satisfactory to your company not so much for the legislation enacted but from the fact that many detrimental bills were introduced, we were able to kill in committee.

Asked to name other concerns or groups which had received similar letters, Senator Thayer mentioned "The Ballard Company of Malone and teachers organizations throughout the state."

"Did you not intend to say to Mr. McGee that you had killed bills detrimental to his company?" Paul J. McCauley, counsel for the Senate Judiciary Committee conducting the hearing, asked.

"I think that is correct," answered Thayer.

The hearing adjourned after a short morning session until next Monday afternoon. Senator Thayer had not completed his testimony when the week-end recess was taken.

OSBORNE ISSUES SECOND FOREST FIRE WARNING

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—A second warning that a "very serious" fire hazard is growing in the forests was issued today by Conservation Commissioner Lithgow Osborne.

There have been scattered fires in recent days, all of which were quickly controlled. One in Suffolk county, however, was the largest in two years.

"We are headed for some very serious fire weather," the commissioner said.

"We earnestly request all persons going into the Catskills, Adirondacks, on Long Island or other wooded areas for the week-end to exercise unusual care."

The commissioner's first fire warning was issued last week.

New Ball, Short Right Boon to Cubs, 2nd for Cards Over Giants, Yanks Win

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Events of the past two days have confirmed [illegible] surmises that this year's edition of the Chicago Cubs has [illegible] around the new and livelier National League ball and the [illegible] right field stands at Wrigley Field.

A strong wind blowing toward the [illegible] left stands made conditions just right for the long hitters of the Cubs and Brooklyn Dodgers the last two days and 17 home runs have been the net result. Brooklyn got a little the better of the home run rivalry but the Cubs won both games, pounding out a 12 to 8 decision yesterday although outhit 15-13. As a result Chicago stretched its league lead to a game and a half over three rivals.

Klein's 8th Homer

While Lon Warneke was staggering through to win the game which saw Chuck Klein wallop his eighth homer, Gabby Hartnett his sixth and Tony Cuccinello his second in two days, Pittsburgh's game with the Phillies was rained out and the Cardinals took their second straight from the Giants, 5 to 4. This combination gave the Pirates second place with New York and St. Louis tied for third.

Jim Mooney, relief pitching after Bill Hallahan had been knocked out in three rounds and some clever base running by Pepper Martin and Joe Medwick gave the Cardinals their eleventh victory in twelve games after they had trailed by three runs at the start. The Cincinnati Reds whipped the fifth-place Braves 5 to 2 as Si Johnson held Boston to seven hits and narrowly missed a shutout.

Gehrig Stars

Lou Gehrig put on a one man show in the American League's headline game, figuring in every one of the Yankees' scoring spurts that brought them a 13 to 3 victory over the Chicago White Sox. He poled two home runs and two doubles to drive in seven runs before retiring after five innings.

Cleveland's Indians gave Boston a six run start in the first inning then came from behind to win 11 to 10 when Earl Averill and Joe Vosmik hit homers, each with two aboard, and the Red Sox gave up seven unearned runs through four errors.

The Athletics gained a 5 to 3 victory over Detroit on home runs by Bob Johnson and Pinky Higgins and the four hit pitching of Roy Mahaffey and Alton Benton. Since the Washington-St. Louis game was rained out, the A's tied the Senators for second place and Cleveland moved into fourth, passing the Tigers and Red Sox.

Hayes-Belloise on WMCA

Friends of Petey Hayes, Saugerties featherweight, who boxes Mike Belloise the Bronx Spider, in a 10 round [illegible] at Madison Square Garden tonight will be able to hear the progress of the bout on their radios.

The match will be broadcast over WMCA at 10 o'clock. This station operates on 570 kilocycles and 526 meters.

One expert has labelled the Hayes-Belloise scrap "a Pier 6 brawl from [illegible] bell." Both are after the featherweight championship left vacant by Kid Chocolate. He picks Belloise to win.

Mike and Petey have met twice, the decision going to Belloise and the other being a draw. They fought at St. Nick's a month ago and this affray, which the officials called even, was the most thrilling affair seen around New York this season.

Twilight Meeting Tonight

City Judge Bernard A. Culloton, president of the Downtown Twilight Baseball League, has called a meeting of the league for Monday evening at 7:30. It will be held in his office at the city hall. All managers of teams are requested to make a special effort to be in attendance as important business will be discussed.

M. S. P.'s Busy Schedule

Director of recreation at Medium Security Prison, Wallkill, L. W. Davis, has his baseball team booked up until the latter part of June. The schedule: May 13, Kingston Senecas; May 20, Mafare Steamer Company of Poughkeepsie; May 27, Clows Dairy of Kingston; May 30, Highland All Stars; June 2, Creiton Athletics of New Jersey; June 10, Highland Falls Collegians; June 17, R. H. Macy Company of New York, and June 24, Drake's Ducks of Newburgh.

Matty Deegan, who played with the old Colonials when they were one of the best semi-pro clubs in the state, and who once tried out with the New York Giants, coaches the Wallkill team. He schooled the nine last summer and turned out a nice combination that played well and showed good sportsmanship in every game, bringing credit to the Kingston man.

Those who attend the game at the "Little Yankee Stadium" Sunday will be favored with more than baseball. Harry Maisenhelder of Kingston, assistant to Mr. Davis, the recreation man, has arranged a program of entertainment featuring talented inmates. Then, too, there will be a concert by the George Washington Band of Montgomery.

Starting time of the proceedings is 1:45 p. m., a little later than first announced. The public is invited.

Pray to Old Sol.

Captain Charlie Tiano of the Schryver All Stars, and Johnny Ashdown, manager, prayed hard this morning for lots of Sunshine during the day to dry the ground and for a clear evening so that their game with Kitty Kelly's All Stars might go on at the Athletic Field today at 6:15.

This evening's game, weather permitting, will inaugurate the twilight policy of the Schryvermen, who play regularly every Sunday at the Kingston Fair Grounds.

Ben Rhymer Missing.

Folks who stand on the banks of the Hudson river Sunday morning to see the outboards cut through the water in their annual dash from Albany to New York will miss Ben Rhymer, the man who put Kingston on the map in this sport.

Ben isn't in the race this year and he wasn't last year either, having decided to quit after several valiant attempts that almost brought him the trophy.

Last May, the news that Ben would not enter his boat in the marathon was heard with chagrin. This year sportsmen of Kingston lament just as much over their idol being out of the race.

Nearby Representatives.

Poughkeepsie has a representative on the list of entries for the dash, Fab Beatty in Class B, professional, and so has Newburgh, J. W. Peck in Class C, amateur. Two entries from Peekskill have been posted with the Middle Atlantic Outboard Association—Alton Mead in the Class C, professional, and Fred W. Travis in the Class F, amateur.

Class C is the most popular among the early entrants this year with 22 boats, and Class B is second with 20. Amateur drivers outnumber the professionals 32-27 in the outboard hydroplane field. Only three drivers have signed for the two newly added outboard runabout classes.

Pimlico Preakness on Saturday Afternoon, Starts 5 Standard Time

By ORLO ROBERTSON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Baltimore, May 11 (AP)—More riches and an honor achieved by only three other horses, lay before the thundering Cavalcade today as a small but select band of three-year olds went through its final rehearsal for the 44th running of the $25,000 Preakness at Pimlico tomorrow.

The task of stopping Mrs. Isabel Dodge Sloane's Kentucky Derby winner seems hopeless in view of his brilliant victory at Churchill Downs last week. Yet seven owners have expressed their willingness to risk the starting fee of $500 on the chances of their charges, three of which opposed Cavalcade in the derby.

If Cavalcade wins he will join the select trio of Sir Barton, Gallant Fox, and Burgoo King, the only horses that ever won both the derby and the Preakness.

Small Field

Although it will be a small field that faces Starter James Milton at about 5 p. m. (EST), in it will be Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery and Mrs. Frank J. Heller's Agrarian, the two horses closest to Cavalcade at the finish of the derby, and High Quest, a stablemate of Cavalcade which won the Wood Memorial.

Bob Smith, trainer of Mrs. Sloane's horses, has announced his intention of also naming Anarchy, but probably will not start more than two, with High Quest and Cavalcade the most likely prospects.

Discovery's Day.

If there is anything in history repeating itself, tomorrow should be Discovery's Day. It was over the Pimlico track that the colt's temperamental sire, Display, ran a courageous race to capture the 1926 running of the Preakness.

In addition to Mrs. Sloane's horses and Discovery and Agrarian, the starting field is expected to come from Mrs. Payne Whitney's Spy Hill, the only other derby starter, Norman Church's Riskulus, Mrs. F. A. Gareaud's Time Supply, George Willing, Jr.'s Swiftsport and Houghton P. Metcalf's Snappy Story.

Riskulus, the hope of the far-west, was named for the derby but was scratched just before post time.

More Honors for Veteran.

A Cavalcade triumph also would be another milestone in "Uncle" Mack Garner's saga of 20 years in the saddle. Just as he had never won a Kentucky derby until last week, the 34-year old veteran has never been astride a Preakness winner. If Cavalcade should not start, Garner will be up on High Quest.

The weather man promised cooperation by forecasting fair weather. Mat Daiger, secretary of the Maryland Jockey Club, is predicting the largest crowd in years, augered by the fact that all of the reserve seats have been sold since the first of the month.

Forest Area of World

The Forest Service says that the world's forest area amounts to 7,500,000,000 acres. In normal times it is estimated that 10,000,000 acres are cut over in this country. By forest area, it must be understood that this term refers to the wooded area, much of which does not contain commercial timber.

SPORT SLANTS

By ALAN J. GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Editor.)

Paul B. Zimmerman, a survivor of the Long Beach earthquake as well as the Rose Bowl flood and sundry intermediate events of greater or lesser importance, deposes and reports as follows on the Pacific Coast sports situation:

"The fight business is picking up sharply, with good bouts in the making to keep the pace fast. From an all-time low of $500 before the new year, the boxing business has risen to capacity crowds and $16,000 gates recently. The Olympic auditorium holds 10,400 and it was packed to overflowing for Tony Canzoneri and Baby Arizmendi. Lee Ramage and Art Lasky, a rugged Jewish heavy-weight from Minneapolis, filled it again. Then more than 9,000 saw Ramage and King Levinsky. Barney Ross and Bobby Pacho, California Mexican, drew about 9,000.

"On May 15 Lasky and Levinsky, who boast hair-line decisions over Ramage, will meet. After that they hope to get Kid Chocolate in with Freddie Miller or Baby Casanova, the tough featherweight from Mexico City.

"The Hollywood Legion stadium, which seats 4,000, also has been collecting capacity crowds. That is the mecca for the motion picture folks, you know. They fill all the ringside seats so that the press can hardly work. Legion post there is going to enlarge the place to 8,000. An outdoor arena seating 20,000 is going up in Hollywood and another in Los Angeles proper is being considered."

League Race One-Sided.

"The Pacific Coast League race has indicated Los Angeles will repeat unless some of the other clubs can get help quickly. The league as a whole is in bad shape. Seattle, for several years in serious financial straits, is traveling by automobile now. The Mission Club farmed a player to Portland on option—of all things.

"As far as playing ability goes, the Angels seem to have such an edge that unless things are evened up a bit none of the clubs can hope to make any money because the pennant race will be so one-sided. Los Angeles lost only six games in the first 29 starts.

"But the Cubs might do something about that, for Frank Demaree, whom they sent back to the coast league because he couldn't hit, has been hitting over .400 and setting the home run pace.

Football Looms Strong.

"A rip-roaring football season is expected in the fall, with no mention of the 1934 Rose Bowl defeat of Stanford being made.

"Southern California has its troubles. The center of the line needs a lot of work since, from guard to guard inclusive, the loss of Larry Stevens, Curtis Youel and Aaron Rosenberg will hurt a lot. Then Ford Palmer, first string end, Bob Erskine, first string tackle, and Bob McNeish, first string blocking half, not to mention Homer Griffith, regular quarterback, will be gone.

"Still, the Trojans may not fare so badly, although they stand to lose to either Stanford or California, or both; and maybe Washington. Stanford and California, by all odds, have the best array of talent available—but California has a game booked which will keep it out of the Rose Bowl and Stanford . . . but let's not bring that up again."

Semi-Finals Today In Dixie Net Play

Memphis, Tenn., May 11 (AP)—Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, tackled Lester Stoeffen, of California in the semi-finals of the Dixie invitation tennis tournament today.

George Lott, of Chicago, the defending champion, opposed J. Gilbert Hall of South Orange, N. J., in the other semi-finals affair.

Yesterday's Results.

In yesterday's quarter finals, Stoeffen eliminated Berkeley Bell of Texas and New York, 6-3, 4-6, 2-6, 6-0, 6-2 and Grant trounced David Marks of Memphis, 6-3, 6-2, 6-1. Hall beat Robert (Lefty) Bryan of Chattanooga, 6-2, 6-2, 6-2, and Lott eliminated Jack Mooney of Atlanta, 6-0, 1-6, 3-6, 6-2, 6-1.

Doubles semi-finals also were scheduled today.

School No. 1 Wins Game From No. 3, 9-7

By a score of 9-7, Public School No. 1 defeated No. 3 at Block Park on Wednesday afternoon in a scheduled Grade League game.

Pitcher for No. 1 was Collins, who had 19 strikeouts. Gerrow was catcher. Fitzgerald and Carson did the pitching for the losers with a total of six strikeouts. Williams and Carson were catchers for No. 3.

Washington, D. C.—Jimmy McMillen, 223, Chicago, threw Hans Kampfer, 220, Germany, 45:00.

Kingston High At Liberty Tomorrow

Saturday afternoon at Liberty, the baseball team of Kingston High will play its third DUSO game of the season, meeting Liberty High School.

Liberty in the past has always been considered an easy team, giving Kingston little trouble. A year ago Kingston administered an 14-1 defeat to Liberty. This year, however, Liberty seems to have changed its ways, as last Saturday she defeated Port Jervis, 6-2. Last year Port Jervis won the DUSO championship and has had to replace only two men for the varsity combination this year.

Captain Jim Martin is slated to do the twirling for the Kinsmen with George Zadany behind the plate. The infield probably will consist of Jack Linden at first, Johnny Murphy at second, Don Moore at short and Ralph DeCicco at third. The outfield positions will be divided up between Mac Tiano, Elmer Hopper, Clay Harder, Tom Maines and "Barrel" Ortale.

WRESTLING LAST NIGHT.

(By The Associated Press.)

Hartford, Conn.—Jim Browning, 235, Verona, Mo., defeated Len Hall, 216, Omaha, straight falls.

Camden, N. J.—Abe Coleman, 205, Chicago, defeated Paul Boesch, 206, New York, two falls to one.

MYSTERIOUS ISLES PUZZLE MAP-MAKERS

Play "Hide and Seek" and Elude Charting.

Washington. — Despite numerous steamer lanes and the even more numerous tracks of wandering freighters that crisscross the oceans of the world, there are still many islands seen only at intervals of years, and others that seem to elude the closest search. Some typical examples of these elusive islands are dealt with in a bulletin from the National Geographic society.

"The world's newest mystery island has been discovered by an Eskimo captain, Takpuk, of Point Barrow, Alaska," says the bulletin. "In 1931 he beached his small whaling sloop on an islet northeast of Point Barrow, a bit of land unmarked on any of the charts of that region. He was armed with a camera, and the photographs which he took show slightly rolling, moss-covered land dotted with many small ponds. Few heard of his discovery until the explorer, Stefansson, recently announced his belief in it. The island is too large to be ice, covered with rocks and soil, as some have suggested.

Annexed Mythical Land.

"Another island which has long baffled explorers received a visit the other day from the British sloop, Milford, bound for the Antarctic. Bouvet island, which the Milford reached after a stormy voyage, is an icy point of rock in the South Atlantic. It was first sighted in 1739, by a French naval officer who thought it a part of the Antarctic continent. Capt. James Cook later looked for it in vain, but proved, by sailing far to the south, that if it existed at all it must be an island.

"Whaling captains in the early eighties reported finding not only Bouvet, but two other islands. These were named Lindsay and Thompson, and were marked on very recent maps. In fact, when Norway annexed Bouvet in 1927, Thompson was included in the claim. However, when the exploring steamer, Discovery II searched the region carefully in 1931, no trace was found of either Thompson or Lindsay, and they have since been erased from all charts.

"Although the polar regions have their share, the Pacific ocean is the real home of elusive islands. There islands come and go with a suddenness that is the despair of mapmakers and empire builders. For instance, there is little Sarah Ann, an inconspicuous dot in mid-Pacific. No one paid any attention to Sarah Ann until it was discovered from charts that she will be the only land in the path of the eclipse of the sun that will occur in 1937. An eclipse of the sun cannot be observed with accuracy from a boat, so astronomers were delighted to find Sarah Ann in such a convenient spot. What was their dismay to discover that the island does not appear on the latest charts, and has not been seen for over a decade.

Bobs Up and Down.

"And there is Falcon island in the Tonga group. Falcon has appeared and disappeared twice within the last century. The island is alternately created by the eruption of a submarine volcano, and worn away by the action of sea and weather. Each time Falcon appears, an official party puts out in a boat, plants a flag on the newborn land, and claims it in the name of the ruler of Tonga.

"The arbitrary behavior of these islands has its tragic side. When the Island of Tuanaki, in the Cook group, disappeared in 1836 more than 13,000 inhabitants, it is estimated, lost their lives. Men who had left the island on fishing trips returned to find an unbroken expanse of water where their homes had been.

"A glance at a present-day map of the Pacific reveals no land between Hawaii and Panama, yet earlier charts show a group of islands roughly halfway between these two points. In 1860 a U. S. sloop-of-war, the Levant, sailed from Honolulu for Panama and disappeared. Months later a broken spar and bits of a vessel identified as the Levant were washed up on the Hawaiian shore. This would indicate that the ship had been wrecked, yet no land was known to exist on the course she sailed. Wild stories circulated. Perhaps the survivors were still living on some unknown island. It was on the Levant that Edward Hale had placed his hero, the Man Without a Country; and some even suggested that Philip Nolan might still be found. In 1904 the U. S. cruiser Tacoma made a careful search in the region where the island was supposed to exist, but discovered nothing."

Frederick Snyder Predicts Changes

were being made to accommodate visitors from this state.

Harry Halverson, president of Kingston Kiwanis, presided at the gathering and following the service of an excellent roast beef dinner, cordially welcomed the guests of the evening. Representatives of the visiting delegations were called upon to introduce their members present and local Kiwanians also presented their guests of the evening. The Middletown delegation took occasion to invite all present to attend the Mother's Day concert to be given in Middletown at 8.45 Sunday evening, the program of which was given a hearty endorsement by Paul Zucca, speaking in his capacity as a member of the Kiwanis state musical committee. One of the numbers on the program is to be given by Jacob Mollott of Kingston.

President Halverson called upon Roger H. Loughran, chairman of the program committee, to introduce Frederick Snyder, the guest speaker of the evening. Mr. Loughran referred to Mr. Snyder as a "double-barreled" Kiwanian, he being a honorary member of Kingston Kiwanis as well as a member of the Binghamton Club and introduced him as a man "who has traveled the length and breadth of the United States, as well as in foreign countries—a distinguished lecturer, scholar and man of business."

Mr. Snyder, as an after dinner speaker, at last, is an exception to the old rule that "a prophet is not without honor save in his own country and among his own people." He has been heard in his native city on many occasions and those who have heard him are always among the keenest to listen to him again. Never at a loss for words, he holds the attention of his hearers without a break as he tells of interesting experiences in almost every part of the world, comments on the events of the day and gives his idea of the future trend of affairs, all interwoven with an inexhaustable fund of humorous anecdote.

"Follow the Beam"

He took as a general topic for his address Thursday evening, "Follow the Beam," suggested by the radio beam that today guides the course of the airplane safely to its destination. He said that despite adverse conditions he was "still an optimist." He defined an optimist as "one who is willing to eat wormy chestnuts in the dark," and a pessimist as "one who has."

Mr. Snyder said that the nation's prayer today should be for security, not prosperity and he voiced a warning to be on guard—to follow the beam that would guide against a lowered morale, against plague, not only of some sweeping disease, but of war, and of personal and national deterioration. He said that there was too much talk today of problems, when the stress should be placed upon possibilities. He found one great problem, "How can we all live together."

The Japanese, said he, would probably say that the question of living was their one great anxiety. The same question, said he, is back of the words of the soap-box orator.

"I do not believe," said the speaker, "that there is disaster ahead if we all recognize the rights of each other." In discussing this line of thought he said "60 per cent of the people on the face of the earth will go to bed hungry tonight" while we are ploughing under foodstuffs and killing cattle. These people, he added, are "too numerous to feed and too poor to tax." The situation is complicated by the fact that 50 per cent of the world's population cannot read or write.

The Situation at Washington

Taking up the situation at Washington, Mr. Snyder said that he did not approve of the poll now being taken by the Literary Digest. He said that the issues were too many and too complicated to be passed upon in such a poll and that a man would be very imprudent to make a quick decision on these questions. He thought also, he said, that it was wrong to make the airmail question an issue between the President and Colonel Lindbergh, saying that one western paper had conducted a vote as to whether the people were for Roosevelt or Lindbergh. The speaker believed in a free discussion of issues, saying that "America will lose her liberty when she loses that," but held that cutting personalities should be left out.

As to the business situation, Mr. Snyder said that he believed business was running in low gear; "the mechanism is not destroyed," he said, "we are in motion and under way, but going slowly." He added, "we probably won't take on higher speed until the rest of the world gets going."

As to monetary matters, the speaker said that we were getting into a perilous situation because of our possession of so much gold. He said that gold was good only because of general agreement and that there was a danger that the rest of the world might suddenly decide on something else. Our dollar he found to be dying with Mexico the only place where our dollar is really important.

Looks For Sharp Headlines.

Mr. Snyder advised his hearers that they might expect some pretty sharp headlines in the papers this summer and fall. He warned them to get braced on their mental feet, not to get jittery and "learn to act upon the best you know."

"Some of the headlines," he said, "may have to do with Hitler." He added, "I can predict for you now Hitler's failure; I believe Hitler is crazy." The speaker said that he believed danger of conflict with Japan was very remote, that the biggest danger to the United States lay in a country not generally suspected. He said that the United States must get closer and closer with the English people and predicted that this country eventually would return to some kind of organic unity with England.

The greatest news during 1934, said Mr. Snyder, will not have to do with disaster, but would be something new in the affairs of men, will utterly change the whole course of the United States and the world and will be the result of scientific investigation.

Referring to his work as a forecaster of the news Mr. Snyder said that among predictions he had made which had come true was the Lindbergh kidnaping, the Akron disaster and the closing of the banks. He closed with a plea that all "try to keep faith," which he said was the hardest thing to do.

Music during the evening was furnished by Paul Zucca, assisted by Paul Purcell, Edward P. Ward and Danny Bittner.

Schryvers' Twilight Debut This Evening At Athletic Field

Weather permitting, the Schryver All Stars will make their bow in twilight baseball this evening at the Athletic Field. Starting time is 6.15 and opposition for the locals will be furnished by Kitty Kelly's Manhattan All Stars.

Comments among sportsmen indicate a crowd for the contest, which is expected to pack plenty of ginger. The Schryvers are out to uphold the favorable impression they made last Sunday by trimming the strong Mt. Vernon A. C. 10-5, and the Manhattans are anxious to add to the string of victories they have started on the summer's record.

Playing here last year the Manhattans defeated the Kingston All Stars in 10 innings, 4-3, and lost to the Jones All Stars.

Ted Fraleigh will start on the mound for the Schryvers with Joe Hoffman behind the bat. Babe Voelker and Bill Thomas will be in reserve.

Johnny Carpenter will play first base, Tommy Davitt second, Fritz Bruhn, shortstop, Lutz Bruhn third. In the outfield there will be Charles Tiano in left, Pres Knight center and Charles Lay, right.

Umpires will be Bill Schwab behind the plate and Dick Dulin on the bases.

The Manhattans will use their regulars, featuring Kitty Kelly, feminine star, at first base.

Next Sunday the Schryvers will play the Murray Hill club at the Fair Grounds.

Goodman, Little, Ahead at the Half

St. Andrews, Scotland, May 11 (AP).—Johnny Goodman, blond American open golf champion, and W. Lawson Little, slugging Californian, amassed a lead of eight up on Roger Wethered and Cyril Tolley of Great Britain today at the halfway mark of one of the four Walker Cup Scotch foursome matches.

The American youngsters picked up four holes on each nine of the morning round. Taking turns at whacking the ball, Goodman and Little carved a 74, one over par, but piled up their tremendous lead on their rivals' mistakes. Tolley and Wethered, far from their usual form, took an 82.

St. Remy A.C. Warmup Saturday, After Games

Sam Barnett's St. Remy A. C. will hold practice Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. He requests all players to be at the drill promptly. Teams wishing to book games should communicate with him by 'phoning 2174-W after 6 o'clock evenings. The St. Remy club plays all games at home.

The St. Remy roster includes S. Barnett, manager; "Chick" Miller, captain; W. Scherer, Crispell, Woods, Benson, Henry, Griffin, Brown, Winkky and Rud Gromoll.

North Rondouters Will Play Polish Po'keepsie Nine

Opponents of Manager Jimmy De Cicco's North Rondout Social Club Sunday afternoon at Hasbrouck Park will be the P. N. A. of Poughkeepsie. Starting time of the game is 3 o'clock.

Andy Celick or Jack Williams will pitch for the Socials with Joe Gardener catching.

The rest of the lineup will be Phil Komosa, 1b; Ray Raskoski, 2b; Lou Nardi, ss; Earl Mitchell, 3b; Tom Beroldi, lf; J. DeCicco, cf; Al Long, rf; reserves—"Milly" Berardi, Joe Brown.

The Polish club has not announced its lineup.

Polo Introduced Here by Officers

Tomorrow evening at 8:15 the local army officers will make their first public appearance in a game of polo with the Powelton Club of Newburgh. Preparations have been completed for a most interesting and exciting evening of entertainment.

The game of polo, which history shows to be one of the oldest of games, as now played consists of four to six periods or chukkers of from 7 to 10 minutes each with short intervals for changing ponies.

The manager of the local team has arranged to have a surprise for the audience between the halves of the game. This surprise will probably be an act by one of the world's best trick riders or an act by the world's best lady lariat thrower.

Every person interested in polo or in horses is invited to be on hand at the new armory tomorrow night promptly at 8:15 when Mayor C. J. Heiselman will throw the ball in for the opening of the game.

BILLIARDS

Results of the two matches in the junior billiard tournament at Nick's Thursday were as follows:

John Canfield 100, Eddie Minasian, 77. High runs, Canfield 14, Minasian 13.

Reuben Lewis 100, John Whitaker 88. High runs Lewis 12, Whitaker 11.

Tonight's match will bring together Dick Williams and Bob Murphy.

Sandow, the Strong Man, Was Weakling, When Boy

The world's most famous strong man was Eugen Sandow, who, while he lived, was the strongest man on earth, says a writer in the Kansas City Times. He died in 1925. Sandow did not always have an extraordinary physique. Born in Konigsberg, Prussia, in 1867, he was in his youth a weakling, and his family many times despaired of his reaching manhood. His father, a jeweler, believed travel would improve the boy's health, and the two visited a number of foreign countries, among them Italy, where Eugen, then sixteen, became interested in the statues of Greek and Roman demigods. If they had had such wonderful bodies, Sandow reasoned, why couldn't persons of the present age? He believed physical training was the answer, and he immediately began a course of such development, using dumbbells and weights. He studied anatomy, and within a few years he was rewarded by the growth of his muscles. No longer a weakling, he gave private exhibitions to his friends, who marveled at the change.

Sandow was 5 feet 8½ inches tall and weighed never less than 196, nor more than 200 pounds. His chest, normal, was 52 inches; expanded it was 61 inches; his biceps measured, flexed, 19½ inches; calf, 18¼; ankles and wrists were relatively small, fingers well shaped and well cared for.

Skiing an Ancient Sport

An exhibition of skis in Berlin has shown that skiing is one of the most ancient sports in the world. Drawings on stones found in Sweden, thought to be of about 3,000 years ago, show skiers in pursuit of reindeer (though chasing reindeer was necessity rather than sport to these early skiers). Some years ago there were found in a peat bog wooden skis from the Stone Age. In the Middle Ages ski matches were a favorite form of entertainment in Scandinavia. Then skiing dropped out of fashion until nearly the end of the last century. Today its devotees are numbered by the hundred thousand.

Oregon's Forests

Names of historic national forest landmarks in Oregon reveal records of human history and migration. Typically historic names are Mount David Douglas, in the Willamette national forest, named in honor of the famous Scottish botanist who, in 1826, first classified the Douglas fir tree for science. Tomahawk island in Multnomah county marks the vicinity where Captain Clark's pipe tomahawk was stolen by Indians in 1806. Snoqualmie national forest is from the Indian tribal name, "Sdoh-kwalb-bluh," or moon people.

MAKO IS FIERCEST OF FINNY FIGHTERS

Gives Greatest Thrill in Fishing, Says Author.

New York.—When it comes to undiluted thrill in fishing there is, according to Zane Grey, nothing that swims which compares with the great mako of New Zealand waters.

In the eyes of Mr. Grey, who is regarded as one of the world's foremost anglers, the great mako is so swift and ferocious a fighter that it is more like a torpedo than a fish.

"Never in my life," writes Mr. Grey in the current issue of Natural History, journal of the American Museum of Natural History, "have I seen such a magnificent fish spectacle as his leaping. He is a stubborn, strong fighter, too, and must be put in a class by himself. While it cannot be proved against him that, like some sharks, he will stalk men, I know that when provoked or hurt he will kill, and that, if he is angry and tastes blood, he will become as ravenous as any shark.

A Leaping Fool.

"One morning, trolling, we had one of the marvelous leaping mako strikes which makes this sport exciting. This mako, which weighed 486 pounds, struck our bait and came out in a magnificent leap, shining in the sunlight, a beautiful blue-and-white shark, thrilling to see. He dropped back in a huge splash and sounded.

"We ran as close as we dared, but nothing happened. I began to fear that this particular fish was not going to perform of his own accord. In cases like this I usually grow impatient and relax vigilance, when as a matter of fact, the thing is to be all the keener. After about a half hour more, we appeared to be getting the upper hand and had the mako close. Its big fin, sharp and triangular, cut the surface. We ran closer, hoping to get pictures of what happened at the gaff; and we were perhaps 200 feet away when the mako leaped unexpectedly.

"He came out slick and fast, without a splash, and as he swept upward, stiff as a poker, gleaming blue-white, with wide pectorals spread and huge tail curved, his great savage head narrowing to a spear point, he was assuredly a spectacle to fire any angler. Then came the second leap—a long, low greyhound bound over the sea, ending in a furious white splash as large as my boat. He shot out so close to our bow that he could have been touched, and he went up to half the height of our mast, 15 feet above the water, and turned in the air to smack down with a resounding roar. Then he split the water just opposite the cockpit and frightfully close. We waited, tingling with suspense, but he did not leap again.

Wore Himself Out.

"All this happened in a few seconds. But he did not break out again. He stayed down and wore himself out in the succeeding half hour, so that when we finally hauled him up to the boat and got the gaff he had only one wag left.

"Our next notable experience with a mako occurred some days after that. We sighted one on the surface and circled him with a bait. He took it. That mako flashed straight for the boat, coming like a streak on the surface. He seized the rudder in his powerful jaws and churned the water into seething foam in his efforts to bite it off. It was iron, of course, and he could not do much damage, except to his teeth. Neither was he huge enough to tear the rudder off, as the sharks do at Suva. But he got away."

During the months of New Zealand fishing, Mr. Grey caught about 70 mako. Ten of these weighed about 400 pounds, while one weighed 580 pounds. Mako, tipping scales at 1,200 pounds, have been caught.

Lodge Hopes for Link to Earth After He Dies

London.—Sir Oliver Lodge, Britain's foremost spiritualist and scientist, has deposited a sealed "test message" with the Society of Psychical Research. When he dies, and he is eighty-three, he will attempt to communicate that message from the hereafter.

The context of the message is known only to Sir Oliver, and its nature is such that it will definitely establish its authenticity if received by mediums.

Some hint of the form of the message is contained in his book, "My Philosophy." In it he takes an imaginary case, suggesting that a verse of even frivolous description, which, unknown to anybody else, has been constantly in the mind of a person, may be remembered after death.

Sir Oliver has been an almost lifelong believer in communication with the dead. As long ago as 1908 he startled the world with an announcement to that effect. Recently he reaffirmed "his absolute belief in life after death," in a countrywide radio broadcast.

Derby of '90s Still Gay, Despite 40-Year Burial

Atlanta.—An old derby, a relic of the gay nineties, was unearthed by workmen excavating for the new building at police headquarters. The derby, in a very good state of preservation, was found in a well which was filled up nearly 40 years ago. R. D. Osterhout, government engineer on the new building, said the derby was of the style popular when he was a boy.

Sales Tax Revenue Is Ahead of Estimates

Albany, May 11.—Receipts from New York State's 1 per cent sales tax for the eleven months it has been in effect slightly exceed preliminary estimates, Mark Graves, commissioner of taxation and finance, revealed today.

In a report submitted to Commissioner Graves by Deputy Commissioner John H. Thompson, director of the Sales Tax Bureau, collections to date are shown to be $22,644,744.92. Estimates submitted at the time the law was enacted by the legislature set the revenue at $2,000,000 per month.

Collections of the tax was commenced on May 1st, 1933. The receipts reported to date represent a levy on sales from May 1st, 1933, through March 31st, 1934.

Collections according to districts are as follows:

Albany	$ 2,434,230.23
New York	11,611,005.12
Brooklyn	3,938,189.94
Utica	762,699.83
Syracuse	1,136,837.67
Rochester	1,070,851.53
Buffalo	1,669,932.00

WOMEN ADD TO FAMILY PURSE SELLING HOME-MADE GOODS

Ithaca, N. Y., May 11.—Each year finds more women eager to add to family incomes by selling home-made foods and crafts, says Mrs. Martha H. Eddy of the New York state college of home economics who recommends that each woman specialize on one or two products in which she has special skill.

"'To make the best better,' is a good marketing slogan to observe," Mrs. Eddy says, and she offers these hints for continued success. "Have a steady supply of goods so that customers need never be disappointed; offer no product for sale unless it is perfect; and find markets near home to save labor and transportation costs."

Six local markets for the sale of home-made foods and crafts have already been established, she notes. They are in Onondaga, Niagara, Ulster, Genesee, Madison, and Cayuga counties, and interest in establishing local markets is increasing every year, though women are proceeding cautiously.

Keeping Cabbage Fresh.

To have cole slaw for more than one meal and to do the cabbage job all at one time, cut the cabbage in very fine, thin pieces, put in cold water and keep in a jar in a cool place. Then it can be taken out when needed.

Step out into the SUNSHINE

How many days of your life are lost in feeling under par? How many hours which might be bright are dull and dispirited?

Half-hearted days are frequently due to common constipation. It clouds your waking hours, takes the sunshine out of living. Yet it can be overcome so easily by eating a delicious cereal.

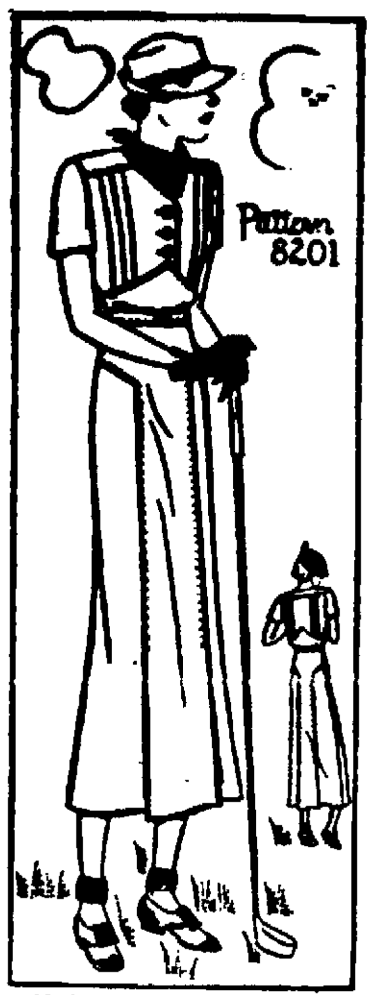
Laboratory tests show Kellogg's ALL-BRAN provides "bulk" and vitamin B to aid elimination. ALL-BRAN is also a fine source of iron.

The "bulk" in ALL-BRAN is much like that in leafy vegetables. Isn't this "cereal way" pleasanter than risking patent medicines?

Two tablespoonfuls daily are usually sufficient. With each meal, in chronic cases. If not relieved this way, see your doctor.

Serve ALL-BRAN as a cereal or use in muffins, breads, omelets, etc. In the red-and-green package. At all grocers. Made by Kellogg in Battle Creek.

OUR DAILY PATTERN



Model For Striped Shirting.

8201. Here is a model which is ideal for active sports wear. The pleats on front and back of waist, give freedom of movement, and the short sleeves and collarless neck make it cool and comfortable. The smooth hipline and yoke give it a smart and trig appearance and the pleats on front and back of skirt add the necessary fulness at the hemline.

One pictures this model made in striped silk shirting of red and blue stripes on a white ground, with the stripes running across the shoulder yoke, and a gay red scarf to set it off. The belt could be in red leather to match the scarf.

Designed in sizes: 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 18 requires 4¾ yards of 39 inch material.

A pattern of this illustration mailed to any address on receipt of 12c in coin or stamps by the Pattern Department, The Freeman, Kingston, N. Y. Be sure to state the size wanted.

A DISH FOR TODAY.

Campfire Stew.

For the first picnics of the season, it is well to have a cooked hot dish which gathers the picnic party around a campfire. Campfire stew is easily prepared, hearty, hot, and wholesome.

1 pound hamburg steak
1 onion, sliced
2 tablespoons fat
1 can vegetable soup
Flour
Salt
Pepper

Form the hamburger into small balls after seasoning it with salt and pepper. Roll the balls in flour. Put the fat into a hot skillet, slice the onion into the fat, and fry lightly until the onion is a glodne brown. Brown the meat balls in this fat. When they are browned on all sides, pour the vegetable soup over them, cover the skillet, and cook all slowly until the meat is done or for about 30 minutes.

For a picnic meal the New York state college of home economics suggests the following menu: Campfire stew, toasted rolls, pickles, fresh pineapple that is sliced and dredged with powdered sugar, or other fruit, cookies, and cocoa.

Renovating Old Dresses.

With tunics and long blouses in style, many an old dress can be given a new lease on life. Perhaps you have a dress that has been spotted or has a worn frontal look? Just make a nice frilly little tunic for wearing over it.

The Baltimore Oriole

The Baltimore oriole is so called because the colors of the male, orange and black, were those of Lord Baltimore.

Fashions by Eleanor Gunn

Sheer Delight

New York—The organdie evening jacket makes its bow and becomes immediately successful among the young things who like naive "pretties."

Among the organdie evening jackets shown are some swagger types. They may be made double with yard-length bell sleeves and self-bows at necklines. Rows and rows of tucks on a brown organdie lend a crisper, more tailored outline to a single jacket model.

Bear in mind that such jackets are a pleasant after-thought and not expected to match the dress or anything of the sort. Naturally there is no law against topping an organdie frock by an organdie jacket, for there are no end of good-looking organdie frocks and for that matter other sheers as well. Among the most popular of the sheers is mousseline de soie. Ingenue silhouettes with a tendency to lower decolletages are favored in the white and pastel organdies and mousselines. Apple green leaf appliques trims a white one displayed recently. Billowing skirt fulness centered in front or in back and draped squared off necklines, distinguished some of the most appealing of these frocks making a perfectly-timed appearance for May and June festivities of a sentimental order.

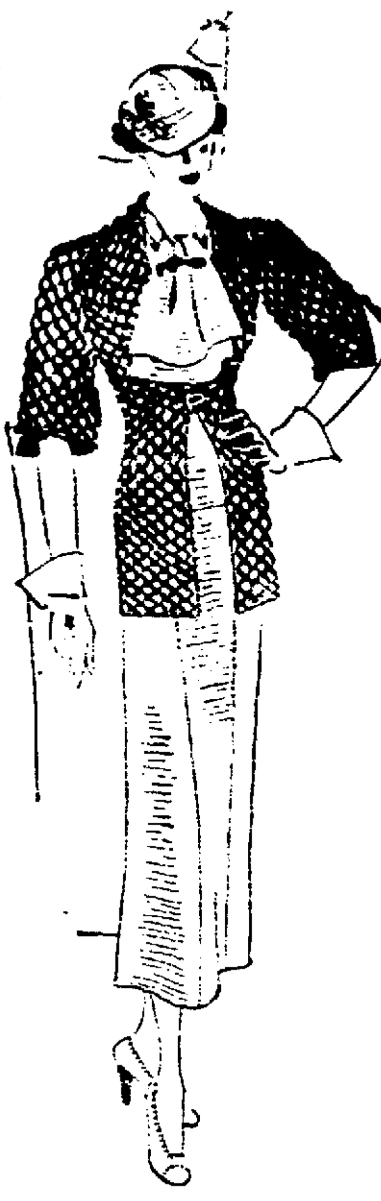
For such dresses the most important details appear to be square decolletages, beltless silhouettes, pleated ruffles, back fulness. Much individuality is suggested in prints. Jacket costumes are thoroughly endorsed and most of the jackets are fingertip or knee length, loose hanging with bow fastening necklines. Blue may be mentioned as an especially important evening color; aqua tones and sky blue are especially prominent.

Summer Reflections

Light pinks are coming forward into the picture. Blossom pink is a tone that is much talked of and seen. There is more of a leaning to yellowy pinks, including tearose, which is particularly lovely in sheers such as organdies and peach.

Blues continue however to lead. The story is not entirely navy, for Copenhagen blue is mentioned as most popular. In the lighter shades the hyacinth is considered smartest. Baby blue is the favorite among the pastels, while in the stronger shade turquoise is very much in the spot light. It is particularly well regarded as an accompaniment to brown.

A NEW KNITTED TYPE



Copyright, 1934, by Fairchild.

Wine red and white combine in a lacy knit zephyr jacket that is fitted and has elbow length sleeves. White is preferred for blouse, skirt and scarf, wine red for the scarf pin. The jacket has a large hook and eye fastener.

DID YOU KNOW THAT

Greens have been coming up steadily, until now they are definitely established among the colors of the season. There is a wide choice in tones.

Below, at left, is a large sports model of Russian homespun tweed in grege. It is trimmed with a lacing to contrast finished with wooden ball buttons.

Below, is a model of navy blue "paramount" calf. It has corners of gold metal, gold "streamline" initials, and a swinging gold metal chain handle.

The large bag below has a "four part" frame in gold and silver metal which mounts a roomy style in brown goat.

A boxy square shape in navy calf, leather lined. It has gold metal "windblown" initials and the flap fastens through a slash in the leather.

STONE RIDGE.

Stone Ridge, May 11.—Mother's Day will be observed in the M. E. Church on Sunday morning, May 13, service beginning at 10:15 o'clock. There will be a short program of recitations and songs by the children of the Sunday School, followed by a Mother's Day sermon by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Strivings, and a distribution of carnations to the mothers present. Sunday School will precede the preaching service, beginning at 9:15 o'clock.

Ralph Sahler, who has suffered a short relapse since his return from the hospital, is able to be out again.

Suggestion for Baked Ham.

Grapejuice, left-over spiced pickle juice or sweet pickle relish gives an excellent flavor to bakdd ham. Use about a cupful and pour it over while baking.

Cleaning Rules

Cleaning and stain-removing tasks can be simplified considerably by the observance of a few well-tried rules. Perhaps these will help you:

Cold water should be used in cleaning plates on which eggs have been served. A pinch of salt added to the water also helps. After the egg is removed, use hot water and soap.

Polished furniture may be washed with a light soap and luke-warm water. It should be thoroughly dry before polish is applied to give it the best luster.

White spots on furniture often may be removed by rubbing with a cloth dipped in household ammonia. Then polish with furniture oil.

Mud spots should not be removed from carpets or fabric until they are thoroughly dry, when they usually can be brushed off.

Try cleaning the bathtub with a rubber sponge. It's easier and more effective.

Sun Dogs and Halos

A sun dog, or parhelion, to use its technical name, is a bright spot which appears near the sun when sunlight shines through a thin cloud composed of ice crystals floating in the atmosphere. Halos are the result of the refraction of the solar rays by these crystals. Sun dogs are sometimes tinged with color, and may appear at all times of the year, because even in the warmest weather the temperature of the upper atmosphere is below freezing.

PORT EWEN

Port Ewen, May 11.—The weekly meeting of the Boy Scouts will be held in the Reformed Church house at 7 o'clock this evening.

The Intermediate Christian Endeavor Society will conduct a hike on Saturday, May 12. All members who plan to go, are requested to meet in front of the Reformed church at 11 a. m. and are asked to bring their lunch. In case of rain, the hike will be postponed to the following Saturday.

Mr. and Mrs. David Kirkby and son, David, have returned to their home in Holland, N. Y., after visiting friends in this place.

Hope Lodge No. 65, K. of P. will hold its regular meeting this evening.

The Ever Ready Club will be entertained at the home of Mrs. William Schweigel Monday evening, May 14.

Using Left-Over Dressing.

The left-over dressing from chickens or turkeys need not be lost. It can be served as a delicious course. Roll it into balls, wrap bacon around it, attaching with a tooth pick if necessary, and then bake or fry. It makes an excellent dish for luncheon or a light, hot supper.

The wind at Albany at 8 a. m. was south, velocity eight miles an hour.

New York Starts Drive on Criminals

New York, May 11 (AP)—New York acted to drive out its criminals today—by bringing them in.

The entire police force was ordered to arrest all known criminals on sight. John F. O'Ryan, police commissioner, personally conducted the drive.

"More than 100 gangsters are behind the bars here," reported Deputy Chief Inspector Vincent Sweeney of Brooklyn early today.

The story was the same in the other four boroughs: Lock-ups were crowded.

Police hoped to gain information as to the recent wave of ruthless crimes, in which several policemen have been slain.

Police said one of their most "important" prisoners was Martin Krompier, 22, whom they identified as a lieutenant of Arthur "Dutch Schultz" Flegenheimer.

Another taken was Bill Bailey, described as the last of the triumvirate that once ruled the Bay Ridge section of Brooklyn.

He was an ally of Charles "Vannie" Higgins and Bill Benson.

Wink, Texas, oil boom town, soon is to have its first city park.

Howe About:

Sentiment
Manufactured Roar
Ford's Philosophy

(C. Bell Syndicate—WNU Service)

By ED HOWE

THE gross sentimentality Americans have long practiced in their public affairs, and do not privately believe in, has done them great harm. No one can doubt it was our foolishly sentimental talk of making the world safe for democracy that landed us in the World war, at an expense which bankrupted us, and harmed instead of promoted democracy; it gave the politicians their present terrible power.

Gross sentimentality (too much sympathy for evil doers) ruined our courts, and built up a legal system that is the astonishment of the intelligent world; it has corrupted our youth, our women and our religion—everything we are now in almost universal revolt against had its inception in gross sentimentality.

The writers and leaders known as the Sob Squad have taken advantage of our smiling, hypocritical acquiescence in sentimental folly until we are the laughing stock of all sane foreigners. Our present groaning because of self-inflicted wounds will make a page in future histories that will disgrace the once brave word American.

• • •

I have lived so long, and heard so many tales, only a very unusual one interests me. Today I gave a little attention to this: A twenty-year-old girl of the best set in a small town is taking a liquor cure.

• • •

I have just been reading another African book, and encountered two well-behaved maidenly ladies who went everywhere. They had no ambition beyond seeing the country; no reforms to introduce. So they were welcomed by all the whites, and the natives found them so unusual they were also delighted to see them. The author thus dismisses them finally: "They had been everywhere in the world that one would like to go, and experienced nothing that in their eyes amounted to risk or discomfort. But they will never write a travel book, their observation is too accurate, their views too sane, to command attention."

• • •

The writing between the lines here is that publishers will print nothing about Africa, or anything else, not absurdly exaggerated. In everything in print publishers insist that lions roar menacingly, maul hunters, and carry off women and children.

In all you read, look out for the manufactured roar, and discount it, or your reading will add to your confusion.

• • •

Henry Ford recently wrote: "A man has no divine right to a job, but must work to find work. Charity undermines character; self-help is the only road to economic salvation. I do not believe in routine charity; I think it a shameful thing that any man should have to stoop to take it or give it. It is neither helpful nor human. The charity of our cities is the most barbarous thing in our system. True charity is a much more costly effort than money giving. Unemployment has become one of the most dreadful words in the language." . . . This philosopher spent a large amount of money in getting this sound thinking before the people, but they paid not the slightest attention to it.

I was once in the company of a mother and daughter, and especially admired the daughter. "She deserves all you say of her now," the mother said, "but as a child she was terrible; I was busy half the time returning things she stole from the neighbors. And she was a tyrant with the other children and with her parents. In her babyhood I as sincerely regretted she ever was born as I now rejoice in it, for she is an unusually creditable woman; she frequently shames me with her ladylike manners." . . . I admired the young woman the more because she so successfully overcame the natural bad habits of youth. Success in life is realization as we grow up that if we are to enjoy the comforts of civilization, we must acquire civilized habits.

I rarely read without encountering a statement that capitalism has failed. . . . Every such statement is silly, but no one can be convinced of it. Capitalism is nothing more than the least troublesome way, demonstrated by long experience, of handling necessary barter. It has no more failed than has marriage, or law, or philosophy; not nearly so much as religion or democracy. . . . What do these men mean when they say capitalism has failed: Are they declaring that when we wish to buy a railroad ticket it is better to pay for it with corn on the ear or pigs on the hoof than with money?

I am an inveterate smoker, but despise the habit; I get no pleasure out of it. I have never owned a satisfactory pipe, used a tobacco that did not bite my tongue, or been able to find a satisfactory cigar. . . . Lately I tried quitting, and the nuisance of quitting was no greater than the nuisance of smoking; in fact, a little less. . . . I shall try the plan on some other of my bad habits, since I have long preached that practice of good habits is easier than practice of bad habits.

Orders Three Armies Upon Yemen's Capital

King Ibn Saud Climaxing His Crushing Drive to Subjugate All Yemen Opens Combined Drive on Ancient Capital.

(Copyright, 1934, By The Associated Press)

London, May 11—King Ibn Saud, climaxing his crushing drive to subjugate all Yemen, spurred three separate armies today in a combined movement upon Sana, Yemen's walled and ancient capital.

The powerful ruler's largest army, under Crown Prince Emir Saud, had opened an offensive against Sada, key city northwest of Sana and the gateway to the picturesque capital.

The second division was advancing from Hodeiah, Yemen's important Red Sea port, already smashed by Ibn Saud's Arabian forces and now policed by them while British, French and Italian warships lie watchfully in the harbor.

The third army, now east of Sana, was ordered to advance immediately upon the capital—a city of about 25,000 population and surrounded by a brick wall five and one-half miles in circumference.

Saudian sources in London revealed Ibn Saud's new campaign plans to the Associated Press today, asserting that "once Sada falls, it will be only a short time until our armies enter and control Sana."

The Saudians, blaming the Imam of Yemen for the Arabian war, vowed that foreigners' interests will be fully protected, asserting the main idea of subjugating Yemen is to bring permanent peace to that area.

King Ibn Saud decided, the Saudians said, on a "war to the finish" when the Imam Yahya failed to keep promises to enter into a 20-year peace arrangement.

They asserted Yemen's ruler sent raiders into territory of Saudi Arabia.

"A man like the Imam, who has broken his word continually, should not be permitted to rule longer," the Saudians said, "so Ibn Saud determined to break that rule."

The Saudians officially absolved Italy of any connection with the Yemeni, refuting reports that the Imam had a defense pact with Italy, which like France has interests across the Red Sea.

It was pointed out that Ibn Saud is on good terms with world powers, particularly Italy, Britain and the United States.

"We are particularly friendly toward the Americans, whom we admire," the Saudians said. "You may be assured that Ibn Saud will make Yemen into a safe, modern area in which foreigners may go unmolested and foreign business can be transacted without fear of any uncertainty such as has marked the Imam's rule."

Damage to State Roads Widespread

Albany, N. Y., May 11 (AP)—State maintenance laborers were pushing forward with the work of repairing winter-wrecked highways as rapidly as possible today in order to condition them for the season's fast increasing traffic.

Most of the damage resulting from the severe winter weather upheavals, breaks and bulges will be repaired before the end of the month, highway department officials estimated, but detour and construction signs will be evidence of the damage through most of the summer on many scattered routes.

Many miles of roads more seriously affected will require rebuilding, it was said.

The department is endeavoring to make detours as few as possible, striving to maintain traffic on most routes despite construction work.

The damage is widespread, it was pointed out, with practically every route needing at least minor repairs. Motorists have been warned to proceed with caution on all highways.

North Carolina will spend $125,000 renovating the state penitentiary at Raleigh in order to make it fireproof.
